B.C. longshoremen have been locked out until they promise to end their slowdown, the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association announced Monday.

The association also said it would sue the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's union for damages resulting from the current waterfront dispute.

In a press conference Monday in Vancouver, association president E. M. Strang said the suit had been made necessary as the result of slowdown tactics practiced by longshoremen who "are being used as pawns in this power play of the union itself."

He said no longshoremen would be called to work today unless the union gave its assurance they would work normally.

The association issued this statement: "Last Wednesday we sent a telegram to Roy Smith, president of the Canadian area (ILWU), protesting the slowdown tactics by members of the ILWU.

"Since then, and for the past several days, we have ordered men for work and repeatedly warned them to cease slowdown tactics and perform in a normal fashion, otherwise they would be discharged. In almost all cases they have ignored the warning, acting on the instructions of the union, and have been discharged.

"We regret we have no alternative but to have our legal counsel proceed against the union with respect to suits for damages, which have now run into substantial sums."

"We have no doubt many of the men are ashamed of having to act in such a manner, but unfortunately they are being used as pawns in this power play of the union itself. It is economically not feasible to continue to employ men who do not perform. Consequently, they will not be employed until we are assured of normal performance."

The employers' association also discussed its discussions

'Grand Union' Certain

BONN (Reuters) — The top bodies of West Germany's Social Democratic party voted Monday to approve their leaders' controversial decision to join a "grand" coalition with the ruling Christian Democrats.

After a heated 10-hour debate lasting until the small hours of this morning, the party's executive, finance committee and the leaders of state organizations endorsed the decision by an overwhelming majority.

The vote was 73 to 19 with no abstentions. The party's parliamentary group was believed certain to add its approval of the proposed alliance when it meets today.

Hot Time In Old Town

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal had its warmest Nov. 29 in 70 years Monday. The temperature reached 60.6 degrees. The 1886 record high was 55.

LONDON (AP) — Britain pressed on Monday night with plans to seek compulsory United Nations sanctions against rebellious white-ruled Rhodesia, but left the door open for a last-minute compromise.

Prime Minister Wilson ordered a high-level mission of Commonwealth and foreign office diplomats to Washington and Ottawa for talks on the Rhodesian crisis and its implications in Africa generally.

OTHER COUNTRIES

The mission, led by Sir Saville Garner, career diplomat in charge of the Commonwealth office, flies to the United States today and later to Ottawa.

An authoritative source said "the government is conducting preliminary consultations with the Commonwealth and other countries about a reference to the United Nations regarding mandatory sanctions as contemplated in the commitments and timetable agreed with Commonwealth prime ministers."

Under extreme pressure by African and Asian statesmen, Wilson pledged last month that Britain will sponsor a call to the Security Council for compulsory sanctions if Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith fails by about Nov. 30 to call off his re-

One Ship Lost, One Safe In Separate Sea Dramas

NEW YORK (AP) — A West German freighter was reported to have sunk and a Panamanian freighter which had radioed earlier she was on fire and sinking was said to be out of danger, in separate dramas at sea Monday night.

Swedish authorities said the 246-foot, 499-ton German vessel Schirokko sank in the Baltic Sea 35 miles east of Farø, which is on the island of Gotland. The U.S. Coast Guard said it received word everyone aboard had been rescued.

The Schirokko's crew of 12 took to lifeboats when the cargo started shifting in a high sea and fire. The reports said a Danish fishing boat took the crew aboard.

The Coast Guard said the Panamanian freighter Sanrocco radioed from the Atlantic 1,800 miles southeast of New York she had put out a fire and needed no more immediate assistance.

ACAPULCO (UPI) — Eleven people died Monday in a shootout between police and rustlers in Mexico's "lawless territory," where the gun law of the old west still prevails.

The dead included Juan Canq Iniguez, head of the rustling gang, three of his men, five policemen and two small children hit by stray bullets in the gun duel.

Six other people were wounded and in serious condition.

BONNER-BARELY

WILLIAMS LAKE (Special) — Attorney-General Bonner, 46, the only Social Credit cabinet minister defeated in the Sept. 12 provincial election, scored a narrow victory Monday over a New Democrat and three other candidates.

Mr. Bonner, loser to the Liberals in Vancouver Point Grey in September, got another chance when William Speare resigned after an easy Cariboo victory.

The close byelection result leaves legislative standings at Social Credit 33, the NDP 16 and Liberals six.

The turnout was better than 70 per cent, believed to be a record, despite chill temperatures, icy winds and snow.

SMALLER MARGIN

Rev. Hartley Dent, the New Democratic candidate, placed second and improved on his September performance when he lost by 1,300 votes to Mr. Speare.

Liberal Lee Skipp was a distant third. Independent Reginald Mullins and Gerald Gougeon, a Vancouver lawyer and member of the Free Trade party, attracted little attention. There were 12,547 eligible voters in the big rural constituency.

SINCE ELECTION

Cariboo has been a strong Social Credit seat since the party's 1952 election.

The victory was Mr. Bonner's second in a country area. He was first elected in Columbia in 1953 when a Social Credit member resigned to make room for the young lawyer who had been drafted into Premier Bennett's first cabinet. Mr. Bonner subsequently ran in the Vancouver area.

The attorney-general received 1,428 votes against 1,200 for Mr. Dent in Quesnel, the largest poll. The spread was a little narrower than in September.

LOST BIG ONE

The 57-year-old Dent, an Anglican minister, took his home poll of 100-Mile House by 791 to 225 but lost Williams Lake, another large poll, 647 to 579.

At exactly 9:40, Mr. Dent stepped across the street to concede defeat.

As he shook the hand of the attorney-general, Mr. Dent said: "I hope the real winner out of this will be Cariboo and the province of British Columbia."

HAD WEATHER

In the midst of his cheering supporters, Mr. Bonner replied: "Whatever we do let's never fight an election in this kind of weather again."

Mr. Bonner commented moments before the NDP conceded:

"I personally expected to drop quite a few votes from the last majority. The way I view it I came from behind in the last three weeks. This is the first time an NDP another campaign has been beaten. In this election the NDP Mafia have been swinging from the trees."

BY WEDNESDAY

He added: "I hope to be back on the job in Victoria by Wednesday."

Queried about his future as a minister, Mr. Dent said:

"What I do now all depends on Bishop Greenwood. I am a qualified teacher and I have been asked to teach junior high school classes in English and social studies. I have not made

Old Chezacut Had Spoken

By BERT BINNY

The 1966 Cariboo byelection now is a matter of history. It was thus in a provincial election of about 25 years ago save for one thing: the Chezacut poll.

Voting in the riding was over and the ballots were counted. A candidate had been elected by a comfortable majority.

But the returns from remote Chezacut, which lies south on the Fraser Plateau by the Chilcotin River, had not appeared.

The political pundits had a topic over which they could still argue. Though it couldn't possibly make any difference, which way would Chezacut go?

It was 10 days or so before the Chezacut returns arrived at headquarters.

The factions gathered. Argument was to be settled once and for all. The wiser money would multiply forthwith.

Suspense was terrific.

The result was proclaimed:

Lebourdais (Lib.) 6, Thomas (CCF) 0. Chezacut had spoken.

500 Fund Jumps

Young Penny-Savers Help Needy to Limit

Generous Greater Victorians boosted the Colonist 500 Fund to $1,835.80 over the weekend and Monday, a rise of almost $400 over Friday's total.

The money was received from 37 separate contributions, the largest flurry of donations to date.

Gifts from children and pensioners were noticeable.

Karen, Bruce and Wendy Irving of 567 Agnes had saved their pennies all year for the fund.

WISH FOR MORE

"Good luck, and we wish we could send more," they wrote.

"The fund will be divided and shared among the area's 300 neediest families in an effort to make this year's Christmas something to be remembered."

Donations to the 500 Fund can be sent or brought in to The Daily Colonist, 2631 Douglas, or with federal Labor Minister Nicholson Saturday.

The association said it told Mr. Nicholson: "That their employers of foremen are ready, willing and anxious to discuss any grievance, any misunderstanding or any new arrangement which might be considered with their individual foremen."

"And that there is every reason to believe any problems that have arisen insofar as foremen are concerned can be worked out between the employer and the employee. "And that, if the problem is a larger one where perhaps the question of employment security is involved, the employers are prepared to work out some plan to deal with that question."

Pulp Pileup

Meanwhile, the strike has caused the layoff of 170 men at the Crofton pulp mill of B.C. Forest Products.

Industrial relations officer

Jack Gallagher said Monday the layoff of men from the kraft mill was made necessary by the pileup of pulp. He said all storage space had been used up and there were no pallets available for loading.

"Even if the strike ends tomorrow, it will take a couple of days to get back into operation," Mr. Gallagher said.

Mr. Gallagher also said 150 maintenance men, about the half the maintenance staff, would be laid off if the strike continued to Friday. He said the size of the layoff would be tempered somewhat by employing men on maintenance that would normally be done during the Christmas shutdown, but the 150 would be the minimum figure.

Drag Out

If the strike continues for a longer period, Mr. Gallagher surmised, it will be possible to ship pulp to the mill by barge for some time. This will drag out the shutdown of the kraft shop, he said.

The newspaper shop at the Crofton operation is unaffected by the strike so far, since most of the newspaper is shipped by rail and is loaded on barges right at the Island docks.

The Crofton plant turns out about 950 tons of paper a day, Mr. Gallagher said.

Last Gone

The Korotan, the last boat to be loaded in Cowichan Bay from the Crofton output, left Monday night. Shipping agents said they did not know when the next boat was expected.

At Ogden Point, 18 longshoremen continued loading the grain ship Ocean Seigneur with a few layoffs in rain squalls, and were expected to be loading again today.

Sixty vessels are in Vancouver, 22 of them grain ships, and shipping was virtually halted Monday as 450 longshoremen were dismissed for slowdown tactics.

The slowdowns followed a strike by 190 striking foremen, who are seeking confirmation. The union has claimed the slowdowns resulted from a lack of supervisory personnel. Other company supervisory personnel have been filling in for the foremen.

The employers' contention is that the foremen are in management category and not entitled to bargaining rights.

Rocket Firing Shortened

PARIS (AP) — The French space agency reported Monday that the first flight of the Corail rocket, to be a stage of a European satellite launcher, proved only partly successful.

The Corail was fired at Hammaguir in the Algerian Sahara Sunday but the firing lasted 62 seconds instead of the planned 100, the agency said. It blamed a faulty circuit. But test results "a great part of the objectives" were attained.

Writer Held

LISBON (Reuters)—Luis Monteiro, Portuguese novelist and playwright, was arrested for suspected crimes against state security, a police spokesman said. Monteiro had been arrested a few years ago but later released without being prosecuted, the spokesman added.

It is a danger sign and I am sure your doctor is taking proper precautions to keep you from losing the baby. There is no reason to think that the child will be defective either physically or mentally.

British Cool to New Smith Offer

betion and to accept a program for eventual Negro - majority rule.

Wilson and key ministers agreed earlier Monday that Smith's latest submission of new ideas failed to conform with Britain's conditions for a settlement.

But officials made clear that the British cabinet will consider today whether these proposals give ground for belief that Smith's regime is genuinely ready to come to terms.

The meeting was called to assess whether Smith's slight retreat — conveyed Saturday to Commonwealth Secretary Herbert Bowden — reflects a genuine political will on the part of the Rhodesians to accept eventual Negro-majority rule without any possibilities of reneging.

British authorities seemed skeptical that Smith's men will in fact be prepared, when the time comes, to transfer the fate of 2,500,000 whites to the control of 4,000,000 Negroes.

But against these feelings, realists among Britain's governing Labor party leaders were deeply conscious of the political and economic dangers that would confront the nation if they seek UN intervention in the form of compulsory sanctions.

Their belief was that such a request to the Security Council by year-end would lead to an escalation of the conflict to the point that Britain would be brought into head-on clashes with white-ruled South Africa, a friendly neighbor of Rhodesia and Britain's fourth-best trade customer.

conditions set by a legal, broadly-based government. Another is to enable a British military presence to be established in Rhodesia to guard against danger of a second rebellion such as that last year when Smith's regime seized independence from Britain.

Bennett Near Bullseye

Strachan told the Colonist from his home at Cedar, south of Nanaimo, the Liberals could credit themselves for Mr. Bonner's win.

Liberal leader Perrault from his home in North Vancouver said that "poor Bob" must have felt pretty blue to have offered "that kind of negative, defensive, sour grapes excuse."

The premier's press conference provided several pay moments.

After victory was evident, Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell slipped in from the office of Premier Bennett's executive assistant, William Budd, to announce:

"There's been a great improvement at Moose Heights — 24, 24, two and one. We lost the poll last time."

Mr. Budd was getting his information by telephone from Scored campaign offices in Quenel and Williams Lake.

During a comparatively quiet moment, Mr. Budd's baritone voice floated through the open door into the premier's office.

FAMILIAR SONG

He was singing Happy Days Are Here Again to Mr. Bonner whom he had just reached in Quenel.

When Mr. Bonner said he expected to be back in Victoria Wednesday, the premier cautioned:

"Drive carefully. After winning, we don't want to lose you now."

Mr. Bennett said the NDP had "brought all their flying squad out from Ontario, with Lewis and his storm troopers. They were so successful in Burrard and the Crow in Alberta — but they have met their Waterloo in the Cariboo."

PARTY ORGANIZER

NDP officials here later said Mr. Bennett was referring to Michael Lewis, formerly of Toronto, who recently joined the NDP staff headquarters in Vancouver as a party organizer.

"I'm very glad indeed the attorney-general has won this great victory in the Cariboo," Mr. Bennett said. "That's wonderful for one outsider to do against so many local boys."

"I give the people of the Cariboo great credit for their judgment."

REGRET VOICED

Mr. Strachan said, "It is obvious from the results the Liberals elected Mr. Bonner, and I regret Mr. Perrault didn't go along with my public request that the Liberals stay out of the by-election so we could have a clear run."

Mr. Perrault said the Liberals went into the election to win and not to plot the downfall of any individual or party.

"The people of the Cariboo have made their decision and I do not quarrel with it," he said.

Grey Cup Runneth Over

VANCOUVER (CP)—Choked courts, warrants for the arrest of bail jumpers and no immediate solution to Vancouver rioting were the aftermath Monday of Grey Cup weekend.

A total of 689 persons were arrested during the weekend for trouble police blamed on football fever.

They said courts will be choked for the next few weeks with cases arising from the rioting that broke into a riot of 5,000 persons Friday night.

WARRANTS OUT
None of the 154 cases of unlawful assembly have been heard by the courts. Fourteen of those failed to appear and warrants were issued for their arrest. Most persons were in their early 20s.

Meanwhile, civic officials reached agreement that something must be done to curb an element of rioting from Grey Cup and other events.

SUGGESTIONS
There were suggestions ranging from banning further Grey Cup games from the city to returning the pre-game parade to its usual Saturday morning. The parade was staged Friday night for the first time.

Of the vast number of persons arrested for drunkenness, most of an older age group, four pleaded guilty and were remanded and the rest got off with light fines, suspended sentences or had the charge withdrawn.

There was a total of 256 drunk charges, nine for causing a disturbance, two for obstructing police, one for assaulting a police officer, six for possession of an offensive weapon (a bottle), one for wilful damage and one for malicious damage.

The total of 689 was comprised of a variety of other charges that police were unable to detail yet. They said the large number of cases had clogged their administrative processes and that more detailed figures were not immediately available.

Three persons were fined $100 on charges arising from the four-hour riot that saw store front windows smashed, decorations ripped down, fires lit in ornamental trash cans, and a wild bottle-throwing melee.

Among those charged with unlawful assembly there was only one out-of-province resident, a 22-year-old man from St. James, Man.

HOOLIGANS BLAMED
Mayor William Rathie earlier blamed the riot on a hooligan element in Vancouver. He said out-of-town football fans were not involved beyond being spectators.

Herb Capozzi, Social Credit MLA and retiring B.C. Lions general manager, called for more Grey Cup events to occupy the crowds attracted to the downtown core.

Police laid the blame for the riot directly on the parade.

There was a similar Grey Cup eve riot when Vancouver played host to the football game in 1963. At that time the parade was staged Saturday morning, a few hours prior to the game.

On the same point, he noted Mr. Diefenbaker's reference to the "50-year drought" before Saskatchewan won a Grey Cup game and added that there are "other kinds of drought."

NDP Leader Douglas echoed the congratulations. The former premier of Saskatchewan noted "Saskatchewan has always had some difficulty with Ottawa—not just in football."

Mr. Diefenbaker praised the event as "epitomizing the pride of Canadians." The game had been a politician's paradise— "No matter where you lived you could express the hope that the Roughriders would win!"

The game was won by Saskatchewan Roughriders, who beat Ottawa Rough Riders 29-14.

The Conservative leader congratulated Saskatchewan for the win—its first Grey Cup victory ever—and the Ottawa team for sportsmanship.

Mr. Pearson associated himself with the praise. In a reference to the Liberal party's failure to obtain any seats from Saskatchewan he mentioned the "many friends in Saskatchewan to whom I owe so much."

Leaders United Praising Game

OTTAWA (CP)—Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and Prime Minister Pearson exchanged light-hearted blocks in the Commons Monday but were on the same team when it came to praising Saturday's Grey Cup football game.

Mr. Diefenbaker praised the event as "epitomizing the pride of Canadians." The game had been a politician's paradise— "No matter where you lived you could express the hope that the Roughriders would win!"

The game was won by Saskatchewan Roughriders, who beat Ottawa Rough Riders 29-14.

The Conservative leader congratulated Saskatchewan for the win—its first Grey Cup victory ever—and the Ottawa team for sportsmanship.

Gun-Shy Dogs Fired

LONDON (CP)—Doberman pinschers, those fierce-looking guard dogs, have been fired from their traditional job—police work—in Britain. British police say they're too smart.

One dog handler explains: "An Alsatian will go for an armed man if I tell him to. But a Doberman is likely to spot the gun—and the potential danger—and just sit down."

For the Dobermans, it's an inglorious end. In 1960, the London Metropolitan force had awarded the Dobermans their silver cup for services rendered.

'Nuisance' Flask Expensive

LONDON (AP)—A piece of crockery that a housemaid complained interfered with her cleaning was sold Monday for $75,000.

A spokesman for the auctioneers, Christie's, said: "For years it has been in the possession of a certain Yorkshire family. It sat on the dining room floor beside a sideboard. In her daily cleaning the maid often complained it got in the way of the vacuum cleaner."

Several weeks ago, Anthony du Boulay, an expert on porcelain and oriental ceramics, spotted it and identified it as a magnificent early Ming blue and white flask from the first quarter of the 15th century.

Safety in Sanity

THE AVERAGE LOSS of life on Canada's highways in every week of the last six months of 1965 was 114. Yet the 10-year average death toll during Safe-Driving Week across the nation is only 59.

This is striking evidence that the publicity which customarily introduces Safe-Driving Week, scheduled for Dec. 1 to 7 this year, has a sobering effect on the driving population.

Defensive driving techniques recommended by the Canadian Highway Safety Council, and every other authority concerned with the ever-growing total of traffic fatalities, have been proved effective.

The pity of it is that the commonsense rules of driving behavior should not apply throughout the year, rather than just for that one week when all agencies concentrate on impressing on the public the need for caution.

Over last weekend in Canada 43 persons died in traffic accidents.

In the United States 743 persons lost their lives in the 102-hour Thanksgiving holiday period, the worst death score in the history of that nation.

The U.S. National Safety Council reports that more than 49,000 persons died in that country in 1965 traffic.

Yet the experience of Safe-Driving Week clearly implies that the remedy for reducing these shocking figures is in the hands of the drivers.

Certainly the mechanical inadequacies of some vehicles contribute to the loss: bad brakes, bald tires, impaired steering and the generally diminishing efficiency that comes with the years and the miles. But if we can cut in half the death toll that is the average across Canada for one week in the year we ought, by the exercise of safe driving habits, to be able to do the same at all times.

The comments of a cross-section of automobile drivers in Victoria, reported in the Sunday editions of The Colonist, indicate the feeling that a large proportion of normally intelligent people do crazy things when they get behind the wheel. And undeniably from time to time almost everyone has lapses. So the best formula for safety is in the assumption that the other fellow may make a mistake. Be ready for it. Just don't make any stupid moves of your own.

Dual Problem

A PORTLAND highway engineer, testifying before the provincial royal commission on automobile insurance, says it isn't up to car manufacturers to accommodate car designs and speed factors to the highways that exist. The shoe is on the other foot. Governments should keep abreast of car styles and production by building roads to accommodate the automobiles.

One doubts that B.C. highway engineers will agree with him, or that the public at large will either. There ought to be some liaison between the two.

There is surely a responsibility on the part of car manufacturers to the market towards which their products are directed, which primarily are the roads and highways upon which the cars will travel. With car designs, length and power changing as these do every year it is impossible in any case for highways to keep pace with them. Highway systems are bound to lag behind.

There never has been much evidence that automotive producers paid much attention to the effect that bigger and more powerful cars have on city traffic problems or the equally growing congestion of highway motor conveyance. Actually these are the two sides of a problem that plagues every local and provincial traffic authority.

It is not to be suggested that the clock should be turned back and nothing but small and slower cars be manufactured, but there is warrant for co-operation and consultation between the companies that make cars and the governing authorities who will have to provide the thoroughfares for their operation. Otherwise chaos is not far off in the future.

Even as it is the multiplicity of motor traffic is almost beyond reasonable control, and as every area grows in population and thus also in number of cars, the situation becomes more alarming every year.

The Portland engineer also said there is no relationship between horsepower and accidents, an opinion with which many people will beg leave to disagree.

Statistical Comfort

FOR THOSE WHO see the day approaching when Ottawa will take nearly all their earnings and give them cradle-to-grave services and a regulated amount of spending money, there may be comfort in the statistical section of a new booklet put out by the taxation division of the national revenue department.

The booklet, Twenty-One Million Dollars a Day, is truly described by Revenue Minister E. J. Benson as unusual. This is the first time in its half-century of existence, he notes, that the division has explained in detail how it goes about administering Canada's tax laws. It does so in most readable form, dealing with taxation in general; the annual tax cycle of payment, filing and enforcement; audits; fraud and avoidance; the taxation data centre; tax appeals and other legal activities; management, and tax forms and the rate structure.

But getting back to the statistical tables that are among the book's interesting and useful features: From the recent federal-provincial conference on tax-sharing came the rather clear warning that taxation is going to have to increase to take care of the variety of services that the governments at both levels want to give the voters. It is somewhat cheering to observe, however, that the upswing in the governmental share of personal incomes has not been as sharp as some taxpayers might have felt in recent years; that it has not reached a record level, and that a cycle is evident which seems to indicate that what goes up must come down—although perhaps not so far.

The effective rate of income tax on total income reported by individual Canadians in T1 returns was 14.6 per cent in 1945. It descended to 7.8 per cent in 1949; climbed to 10.4 per cent in 1952; went down to 8.5 per cent in 1958, and in the next six years, to the latest period reported, rose gradually to 10.8 per cent.

So it may be a long, long time before the government takes it almost all.

"Thanks to bloomin' Batman they've put me on a three-day week."

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax ...
By TOM TAYLOR

DO you "boo" the principle, as the Ettrick Shepherd said when he admitted playing the odd game of whist even though not shoring the Knave of Spades lying too close to the Bible.

Principle and practice are so different, you see.

Of the practice of card playing, however, there's never a doubt. Samuel Johnson never learned to play but did not scruple to opine that this diversion generates kindness and consolidates society. I can think of occasions where it might have the opposite effect, but his words should soothe the souls of those Victorians who sit down day after day to a game of bridge.

Assuming they need soothing. I don't suppose card players ever give thought to the social positions they handle, taking them for granted. Naturally when they're arranging all those lovely Aces and Kings they're preoccupied with the present and very immediate future but the past has laid its finger on them just the same.

I have just recently I have pondered the significance of a Spade or a Club, for instance, perhaps because although lucky at cards I quantity consider them a waste of time.

Long ago I thought a waste unless I was playing with the loser. Card playing was like modern bingo, a disease in some places. It is intriguing anyway to learn that during the Middle Ages the four suits represented the four social positions. Now a day's social mores are more even-steven, especially with card playing, where skill is not the monopoly of the intellectual.

It's rather a phenomenon in fact that as the cards are dealt, a circumstance deflating any affected superiority deriving from card playing supremacy.

The symbol of Spades, curiously enough since elsewhere a spade is a humble instrument, was originally the sword of nobility; and Hearts were the eagle of chivalry of the church and clergy. I can only assume from this that clergymen were avid card players in the long ago. They may still be for all I know.

At any rate there once was a card game called Pope Joan in which the winning card was the Nine of Diamonds, or Pope. So many Scots families were ruined at gaming tables on the turn of a card — but, but, what for? I have — that it became known as the Curse of Scotland.

It wasn't whisky after all, you see. There is another theory about this, though. It's said that the Duke of Cumberland used a Nine of Diamonds to write his order for the massacre of the wounded at Culloden, hence the curse associated with this particular card.

To continue the social standings, tradespeople and merchants were represented by coins, an appropriate symbol, later transformed into Diamonds. At the bottom of the scale the peasant had his Club, or baton. In what or bridge as you know he is still at the bottom.

If you ever wondered at the fancy dress of the higher suit symbols, it appears that once the Kings and Knaves showed their legs and garters. Nor was it modesty that changed the pattern; rather the discovery that a wily opponent could spot the court cards in another hand by watching them being turned right side up. Thus the doubleheaders.

Playing cards belong therefore to the skein of history, although their modern devotees don't give this a thought. Fortune's fickle favor is what arrests their attention, be it a pink tea afternoon game or the cold uncaring throb of the gaming table.

The Prime Minister Leads A Carefully Sheltered Life

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

Saskatchewan, he wanted it stopped, leaving off an armchair in the private business car, shouting: "Hey, it's Floral — home of Gordie Howe!"

Up to the prime minister's floor comes a big basket of fruit except for a scarlet-coated Mountie, along for strictly decorative or ceremonial purposes, travelled unescorted.

Oh, sure, his executive assistant or press secretary would be on hand, along with perhaps a couple of stenographers — but they scarcely were bodyguards.

Usually, for appearance's sake, there'd be the Mountie at the foot of the airport ramp.

And of course, the city police in whatever municipality they might be visiting, customarily would have a couple of motorcycle outriders or a squad car assigned.

Not as a bodyguard, but rather to run interference for the prime minister's car or motorcycle through city traffic.

It was last week with Mr. Mackenzie King, with Mr. Louis St. Laurent, with Mr. John Diefenbaker, and up until the "mad bomber" rocked Parliament Hill, with Prime Minister Pearson.

And used to be, if you were political fan enough, you could follow your way through the VIP circle ringing the prime minister and speak to him, usually shaking hands.

But no more.

Now, perhaps against his own personal will and wishes, but surely not against his better judgment, they have thrown a curtain of safety about him.

When he's on the political road, flying and then motoring, his frequent speaking engagements, a plainclothes RCMP guard goes ahead of him.

Before he arrives, his hotel room is checked electronically for hidden microphones and concealed explosives.

They turn up the wall-to-wall carpets and turn down the beds, upturn the mattresses and the cushions of the closets, cabinets and all the drawers.

Then two of them, revolvers in shoulder holsters strapped under their navy blue business suits, take up posts in two rooms, one on either side of the prime minister's suite.

They have the names of occupants of the other rooms on the prime minister's floor, and have made sure that any that are vacant have been locked.

They have the names, too, of those in the prime minister's official party and of those local political wheels or municipal nabobs who are on the visiting list.

Strangers stepping out of elevators are stopped. Nobody unknown or unchecked by the security men gets onto the floor.

Even the chambermaids don't get into the prime minister's suite to tidy or freshen it up without the security men along to watch the vacuuming, the waste-basket emptying, the towel changing and the rest of the housekeeping chores.

Ever any problems? Well, there was the time in Toronto when a noisy gang of hockey players charged out of the elevator on the wrong floor — the prime minister's.

It was after a game, but the security men managed to round them up and herd them along the corridor and down the stairs before the prime minister popped out of his suite to discover what all the hilarious uproar was about.

The Mounties knew that if they didn't get the hockey crew out of sight and sound fast, the prime minister would want to chew over the night's game with them.

He's that gone on sport. So the fact that in the 1962 election campaign, when his train whistled through Floral, scarcely touched by the metropolitan explosion that is gradually creeping down the coast and destroying its beauty like a deadly fungus. Three years ago building had not even begun.

Now there are 2,400 students — plus, inevitably, 1,700 cars. By 1970 there will be 6,000; by 1980 there will be 27,000 — and something like $200 million will have been spent.

But more impressive even than the scale of the plans or the speed with which they are being carried out is the vision behind them. It is essentially the vision of Daniel G. Aldrich, Irvine's chancellor, an agricultural turned university administrator. It is a vision that emphatically repudiates the ivory tower concept of a university.

At present, Irvine is set in a predominantly rural landscape. Aldrich sees it as one of the university's functions to "serve the total educational needs" of the community. This means, for instance, running courses for people who want to keep up with the latest techniques.

"People in industry know that unless they keep up, tomorrow someone may come out of the university to take their place," Aldrich says. "A computer person like me will need in that field even five years hence."

So the emphasis at Irvine is on that new technology of knowledge: the computer. "We have 1,000 of our students using computers and learning how to use them," a computer professor says. "A computer processes the academic requirements of the students. A computer, ultimately may even replace the library, storing far more information than most university libraries can ever hope to do. A computer even teaches students — for unlike the ordinary Model T teaching machine it can adjust itself to the needs of the individual."

Eventually, Aldrich hopes, the computer will take over all the routine drudgery of instruction, so giving the academic staff more time to give to individual students.

Some statistics illustrate what has been achieved. Of the completing their high school education, nearly 75 per cent receive some form of higher education. The top 12 per cent in ability go to universities, of which the University of California, with 77,000 students on nine campuses, is by far the biggest. Sixteen state colleges offer four-year university courses, 72 community colleges offer two-year technical and vocational courses, for example, in nursing and accounting. But this is only the beginning: The University of California alone is planning to take a student population of 146,000 by 1975, and 274,000 by the year 2,000.

More eloquent than statistics, however, is what is actually being done. Take the example of Irvine, one of the nine campuses of the University of California, but in effect an independent university. It lies some 50 miles south of Los Angeles on a 1,500-acre site, between the hills and the sea. It is a countryside of orange groves and fields growing red peppers. It is as yet scarcely touched by the metropolitan explosion that is gradually creeping down the coast and destroying its beauty like a deadly fungus. Three years ago building had not even begun.

Now there are 2,400 students — plus, inevitably, 1,700 cars. By 1970 there will be 6,000; by 1980 there will be 27,000 — and something like $200 million will have been spent.

But more impressive even than the scale of the plans or the speed with which they are being carried out is the vision behind them. It is essentially the vision of Daniel G. Aldrich, Irvine's chancellor, an agricultural turned university administrator. It is a vision that emphatically repudiates the ivory tower concept of a university.

At present, Irvine is set in a predominantly rural landscape. Aldrich sees it as one of the university's functions to "serve the total educational needs" of the community. This means, for instance, running courses for people who want to keep up with the latest techniques.

"People in industry know that unless they keep up, tomorrow someone may come out of the university to take their place," Aldrich says. "A computer person like me will need in that field even five years hence."

So the emphasis at Irvine is on that new technology of knowledge: the computer. "We have 1,000 of our students using computers and learning how to use them," a computer professor says. "A computer processes the academic requirements of the students. A computer, ultimately may even replace the library, storing far more information than most university libraries can ever hope to do. A computer even teaches students — for unlike the ordinary Model T teaching machine it can adjust itself to the needs of the individual."

Eventually, Aldrich hopes, the computer will take over all the routine drudgery of instruction, so giving the academic staff more time to give to individual students.

Some statistics illustrate what has been achieved. Of the completing their high school education, nearly 75 per cent receive some form of higher education. The top 12 per cent in ability go to universities, of which the University of California, with 77,000 students on nine campuses, is by far the biggest. Sixteen state colleges offer four-year university courses, 72 community colleges offer two-year technical and vocational courses, for example, in nursing and accounting. But this is only the beginning: The University of California alone is planning to take a student population of 146,000 by 1975, and 274,000 by the year 2,000.

More eloquent than statistics, however, is what is actually being done. Take the example of Irvine, one of the nine campuses of the University of California, but in effect an independent university. It lies some 50 miles south of Los Angeles on a 1,500-acre site, between the hills and the sea. It is a countryside of orange groves and fields growing red peppers. It is as yet scarcely touched by the metropolitan explosion that is gradually creeping down the coast and destroying its beauty like a deadly fungus. Three years ago building had not even begun.

Now there are 2,400 students — plus, inevitably, 1,700 cars. By 1970 there will be 6,000; by 1980 there will be 27,000 — and something like $200 million will have been spent.

Our Readers' Views

To be considered for publication in this column, letters must be on subjects of general interest and of about 100 words. They must be accompanied by writer's name and address, but will be given in full only if they are of interest.

I HAVE watched the first three of the "Sunday" shows being transmitted through CBC's Vancouver outlet, CBUT.

While I am tolerant enough to feel that the incredible quality and general poor quality of the first show may have been due to inadequate preparation, the continued poor taste, garish presentation, and brazenness of the interviewer — what's his name? Zolt — lead me to think this is the intended format for the whole series.

I enjoy a certain measure of controversy in public affairs programs; and was one of the audience which gave "This Hour has Seven Days" the biggest rating in Canada's TV history. But I cannot stomach the vulgarity of its poor imitation "Sunday." Nor do I feel I should be pestered in my own living room by the bear-pit into which the directors have sunk.

Criticism needs to be constructive, and I would like to suggest they consider the preferences of the adults who make up the majority of post-8 p.m. viewers. Others I have talked to agree with me: We do not like flashing lighting and quick changes of scene; they hurt our eyes. We do not like the gaudy, accompanied caterwauling of so-called folk singers. We do not like phony-Zen poets seated cross-legged while they spout obscenities. We do not understand why it is considered necessary to interview — and vilify — such a high proportion of Americans, both public figures, and notorious characters. God knows we have enough of our own that need girdling! We fail to see why our own money should be spent on a program we do not like.

I am reluctant to engage in arguments. I like peace — but not at the price of having to suffer through a show which must be an embarrassment to its producers — as it is to me. Therefore, I am making my comments public, in that I am offering copies of this letter to Miss LaMarsh, Mr. Chatterton, my MP, CBUT Vancouver, the editor of my paper, The Daily Colonist, and in Maclean's Magazine.

An Insult

Thank you for your editorial of Nov. 22 regarding CBC's "Sunday."

The program is an insult to the intelligence of normal people and I agree with every adjective you used. But what of the bear-pit audience? Is it a paid group, a clique, to show us how popular the program is?

The interview with the widow of Lee Harvey Oswald was brutal, unchivalrous and distasteful, and the clinic item equally so. There was not a single redeeming feature in the entire program.

If we have to endure this appalling hour could it not be interchanged with the news?

Vancouver's programs, Home Edition News and The Seven O'Clock Show, with their principals who put not a foot wrong either in taste or in the English language, are, in my humble opinion, examples of what CBC service should be.

Is there any way to get rid of "Sunday?"

Cyprus Needs Bases

By HERMAN GOULT
from Nicosia

BRITAIN'S sovereign bases in Cyprus no longer serve any useful strategic purpose and constitute only a drain upon Britain's present overstrained economy, said President Makarios recently. He foresaw that in the not too distant future they will be relinquished voluntarily by the British government.

But if there is any sudden decision from London, two members of the Cyprus government who may be expected to view it with some concern are the minister of commerce and industry, Mr. A. Aratzos, and the finance minister, Mr. Renos Solomides. For it has just been revealed in an official economic report for 1965 that it was mainly the income derived from the bases that enabled the republic to balance its trading account for that year.

In 1965, Cyprus — the East Mediterranean island which is one of the smallest member states of the Commonwealth — exported minerals, agricultural produce and minor manufactures to a total value of £25 million; but she imported machinery, manufactured goods and consumables to the value of over £50 million, leaving her trading account £25 million in the red.

The economic report shows that income from the sovereign bases, from the United Nations peace-keeping force which has been in the island since March, 1964, to keep the peace between the Greek and Turkish Cypriots, from remittances from Cypriots overseas, tourism and other "invisible" was on such a scale that, despite the heavy direct trading deficit, the trading account after taking these factors into account was nearly £9 million on the right side.

Britain's contribution to this minor economic miracle was, the report shows, £17,700,000. It was made up in part of salaries and wages paid to the (approximately 10,000) Greek Cypriots employed in the bases and money spent by servicemen and their families stationed there. The contribution represented by spending by United Nations troops (once described by President Makarios as "permanent tourists") it was not assessed in the report, but it was "substantial."

Although the report described 1965 as "a year of economic boom" for Cyprus, it also expressed concern that the economy depends so much upon foreign sources of income. And it indicated that in order to correct this potentially disastrous state of affairs, emphasis in future will be placed upon development of agriculture and expansion of tourism.

Tourism on this ancient and sunny island has indeed begun this year to revive considerably after the setback caused by the strife between Greek and Turkish Cypriots which broke out at Christmas, 1963, and continued for eight months into 1964. And tourism has received a very welcome fillip from the British restrictions on spending outside the sterling area. The Cyprus high commission in London has reported a "flood" of inquiries for tourist information. There is also a marked revival of interest in nearby Israel.

It remains to be seen how far this, and development of the island's agriculture under the guidance of the UN Technical Aid Mission which has been working here since 1961, can bridge the gap in the balance of payments in an island which has built up one of the highest standards of living in the Middle East mainly on an import economy.

Britain's bases in Cyprus are sovereign areas which were retained under the agreements of 1961 which led to independence for the island. They cover about 96 square miles — out of 3,500 square miles. They include a major military encampment and logistics centre at Dhekelia on the island's east coast. The currently being used chiefly as the main base for UN peace force operations — and the giant air force base of Akrotiri on the south coast, which is a major training and staging post and one of the biggest overseas centres of the Royal Air Force.

President Makarios has been under constant pressure from President Nasser of the United Arab Republic to "liquidate" the bases, which he sees as a threat to the Arab countries of the Middle East. The Soviet Union, too, would like to see them dismantled, for they represent a major prop of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Central Treaty Organization, whose role it is to discourage Communist expansion in the areas of their deployment.

President Makarios has avoided hitherto taking any hasty action, confident that Britain will in due course withdraw from Cyprus, restoring the base areas to the republic as is laid down in the treaties of 1960. He has also assured President Nasser that "the Cypriot people will never allow the bases to be used as a springboard of aggression against our Arab neighbors."

College Suicide Toll Mounts

By BERNARD GAVZER

Suicide is the No. 2 cause of death among American college students. Among those aged 15 to 19 it is the No. 3 cause of death. There are nearly three known adolescent suicides a day and some experts say the true figure may be 5,000 a year.

"The most onerous suicide is the suicide of the adolescent," says Dr. Edwin S. Shneidman of Los Angeles, special consultant to the U.S. National Institute of Mental Health.

"In such a suicide we are troubled with the assault upon our accepted values. We are tormented because we say, 'Here is a person who is about to enter the external potential of life and yet because of internal conflict takes his own life.'"

Why should such young people kill themselves, or try to? "There are five categories of problems most troubling to adolescents," says Dr. Stanley F. Yolles, institute director. "These are problems the young people do not readily discuss with people who are in the position to solve them. They are: Parents, poverty, peers, broken romances and pregnancy."

In the college atmosphere, there is intolerable pressure for some young people. Often it is indirectly applied. "My parents have not said a thing to me about maintaining a high average," says one girl. "But... I don't think I could face them if I failed."

A student attending the University of Connecticut says: "I was always bothered when final exams came, but now it's too much. If I don't really score high, I mean real high, then it means that I could end up being drafted and going to Viet Nam. When I think about that, I think sometimes I'd rather kill myself."

School problems make students a high-risk group. The New Jersey education department said a three-year study showed 41 students killed themselves and 738 tried, but failed. Thousands made suicide threats.

BACKGROUND

The most common reason is the pressure to achieve high grades. The danger period is just before examinations. A recent study indicates that by the time 1966 ends, as many as 90,000 U.S. college students will have threatened suicide and 1,000 will have succeeded.

"I am not one who believes that suicide is related to humidity or the phases of the moon," Dr. Shneidman says. "I believe it has to do with a damp and drizzly November in the soul."

In defining suicidal people, the Los Angeles Suicide Prevention Centre concluded: "They are no longer able to sweep their feelings under the rug of indifference and denial. They must face their feelings of hopelessness, helplessness and dependency."

Dr. Robert E. Litman of the centre says the suicidal person faces his problems with tunnel vision. This is described in these terms:

"If an unmarried girl should become pregnant or believes she is pregnant, she may begin considering her problem by listing her alternatives. So she says, 'A—I could have the baby and keep it. B—I could have the baby and give it up for adoption. C—I could go to Japan for a legal abortion. D—I could go to Mexico for a safe abortion. E—I could try to have an abortion here. F—I could force Joe to marry me. G, H, I... S—I could commit suicide.'"

As the girl gets deeper into her problems her vision narrows and she keeps coming back to S—suicide.

Studies show she is more prone to attempt suicide if she has a background in which a parent, relative or close friend has attempted suicide; if one or both of her natural parents was absent from home through divorce, separation or death; if there was a step-parent with whom she could not get along; or if communication with her parents was poor.

Germany's Kiesinger and Brandt

Ex-Foes to Be Partners?

By BOD CURRIE
From London

Barring unforeseen complications Kurt George Kiesinger, Christian Democrat, Roman Catholic and former Nazi, will be chancellor of West Germany by week's end.

If it comes off, the man who made it possible, ironically enough, is Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin, leader of the opposition Social Democratic party who has tentatively agreed to the "grand coalition" under which he would be vice-chancellor and probably foreign minister.

Many in Brandt's own party find the alliance distasteful but after an angry 10-hour debate among party members of the Bundestag Saturday they agreed to let Brandt go ahead with negotiations. Final approval, they said, would depend on how well he did in negotiating party representation in the new cabinet.

Despite the opposition, Brandt appeared confident and even named a colleague to take over his duties as mayor. Opponents within the party argue that Brandt would be well advised to form a coalition with the small Free Democratic party, which brought about the downfall of Chancellor Ludwig Erhard a month ago when it withdrew from that coalition following a dispute over economic matters.

They plead that in such a grouping the Social Democrats would be in the majority, whereas with the Christian Democrats they would be but a junior partner.

Other members argue that party—second largest in West Germany—should stay in opposition in the hope of winning an outright majority in the 1969 Bundestag elections.

Brandt feels that a coalition with the Free Democrats would give only a precarious majority of six in the 496-member house.

It makes a strange picture—former Nazi Kiesinger and anti-Nazi Brandt, who fought in the Norwegian underground during the Second World War, smilingly meeting with reporters to announce their tentative agreement.

For Brandt, 52, it represents somewhat of a comeback since he had twice led his party to defeat and had announced after the 1965 general election that he would not make a third attempt. But when the Erhard government began to deteriorate he decided to reconsider.

Kiesinger, 62-year-old lawyer, insists he fought Nazi doctrine and denies he was a liaison man between Nazi Foreign Minister Ribbentrop and Propaganda Minister Goebbels. He says he served only in a minor position during the war.

His two greatest supporters are former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and Franz Josef Strauss, former defense minister turned lawmaker in engineering Kiesinger's nomination.

Both favor with Kiesinger a greater and closer friendship with President de Gaulle of France, whereas Erhard had strongly supported the United Nations in opposing France's withdrawal from NATO.

Viet Nam's 'Other Side' Speaks with Many Voices

By JOSEPH KRAFT
From Paris

In talking about "the other side" in the Vietnamese war, Americans tend to lapse into the assumption that there is a unity stretching from the Viet Cong guerrillas in the field through Hanoi to the Communist countries and parties around the world.

But, in the course of a trip that has put me in touch with most of the major elements of the other side, I have been struck by difference more than unity and, most of all, by the broad scope left to local option in the making of major decisions on the war.

The Viet Cong, or National Liberation Front, concentrates intensely on South Viet Nam. Its representatives talk of an independent South Viet Nam, with its own government, parliament and constitution. They deny that Hanoi could negotiate for the South.

The North Vietnamese also concentrate heavily on their own problem. For them, the first thing that has to be done before anything else is the cessation of the American bombing of North Viet Nam, unilaterally and for good.

The North Vietnamese directed my attention toward recent official declarations—an editorial in the September issue of the theoretical journal Hoc Tap and a statement by the party theoretician Le Duc Tho on the 30th anniversary of the Popular Front here in France—both of which stressed the utility of popular front tactics. But why do the North Vietnamese suddenly begin laying it on thick about something that is as much a part of their doctrine as republican government is a part of American lore?

My guess is that Hanoi, perhaps against the will of Peking, is saying that a settlement in Viet Nam could come through negotiations between the Viet Cong and the Saigon government for a popular front, absorbing persons on both sides. But that, of course, means that Hanoi is throwing the issue of settlement back to the Viet Cong.

With respect to the Chinese Communists, they seem, for reasons of internal policy and because of the split with Russia, to be occupying all available positions on the extreme far-left. In that vein, they have moved beyond the Viet Cong and Hanoi to say that not even the Geneva accords form a basis for settlement.

But the Chinese, unlike the Russians, have played their hand in Hanoi with great self-effacement and subtlety. People who should know think that Peking, while prepared to help Hanoi in the fight if so asked, is also prepared to go along with any settlement endorsed by Hanoi.

As to the Soviet Union, every day that the bombing of North Viet Nam continues, the Russians lose a little bit of their claim to be a world power on the same footing as the United States. Moscow, accordingly, is obliged to help Hanoi and is interested in putting an end to the war.

But when it comes to promoting a settlement in Viet Nam, the Russians seem to have next to no influence—the less so, since Hanoi would probably not want to jeopardize relations with Peking by allowing Moscow to play the big role as peacemaker.

The upshot of the complicated interplay is to underline anew the importance of local factors. More than ever, it seems to me, the key to a settlement in Viet Nam is a government in Saigon that is ready to negotiate with the other side.

Emperor Lyndon Dethroned

By GORDON DONALDSON, from Washington

Lyndon Johnson's trouble with his personal pronouns is increasing as his personal popularity decreases. When he took office three years ago he told a sad, worried people, "I am the only president you have" and humbly asked their support.

Now the "I" has become "we." It's all very well for him to announce that "we" will do in Viet Nam. This could mean the administration, the American people or their allies. But when he said "we" would undergo surgery it was a royal pronouncement.

It was a fitting style for a president who had won an overwhelming victory at the polls and was firmly in control of his Democratic Party and both Houses of Congress.

But it came too late. As Newsweek Magazine commented, the November elections ended the 1,000 day reign of Emperor Lyndon The First and reduced him to a mere president. His reputation for political infallibility is gone and with it his popularity.

The latest Louis Harris poll shows a sizeable majority of Americans, particularly those under 50, prefer Robert Kennedy to Johnson in 1968.

But these setbacks have not dented the enormous vanity of LBJ. He switches back to the singular when talking of institutions that don't belong to him at all—"my" Congress, "my" Vice-President and "my" Supreme Court.

During his far Eastern tour, he is reported to have referred to Australia's Harold Holt as "my" Prime Minister. So his critics have some justification for referring to Viet Nam as "his" war. He inherited it from his two predecessors, but has done more than either of them to make it what it is today.

Johnson is still admired for his tremendous energy and his skill in pushing legislation through Congress. But his Texas country style irritates and his flat speeches are becoming a bore and worst of all, there is the "credibility gap" which is a polite way of saying his statements cannot be taken at face value.

As a senate leader he was magnificent—as a national party leader he has been a disappointment.

His achievements as international statesman are few. He tried to play the old senate game of handing out favors, to be redeemed when needed, and it didn't work. Viet Nam now dominates his thinking to such an extent that any ally who contributes more than lip-service to that cause can have the keys to the bullion at Fort Knox. There have been few takers.

As the president rests up in Texas before facing a new and far more hostile Congress in January he needs to plan a re-shaping of his image and a new campaign strategy for the two years ahead.

One suggestion is to drop the royal "we." It no longer fits.

Pay Boost Helped

Service Recruiting Better

HALIFAX (CP) — Air Marshal E. M. Reyno, chief of personnel for the armed forces, said Monday there has been an encouraging trend in armed forces recruitment since a pay increase announced last month by Defence Minister Hellyer.

He told a news conference the increase was having a particularly beneficial effect on recruitment rates of technical personnel, the major problem in the forces' current manpower shortage.

The air marshal, who met with chiefs and petty officers during his visit, denied suggestions the government's unification proposals was hurting service morale.

MORALE UNBURNED

The air marshal, who met with chiefs and petty officers during his visit, denied suggestions the government's unification proposals was hurting service morale.

He said poor morale was not responsible for the services' being 5,000 under their assigned strength of 110,000 men.

The most serious shortage was in the navy, perhaps because "people just don't want to go to sea," although all services needed more technical personnel.

'WORK HARDER'

But he denied that the services were unable to meet commitments.

"Our specialists are just having to work a little harder," Unification would help by reducing the number of specialists needed and all trained personnel were being encouraged to remain in the services.

He said the unification program should be defended by other officers should not be placed in any political context by politicians in any parties. In his own case, these statements were a straight matter of duty.

Morale was his responsibility and he could not remain silent while morale suffered from un-

QUEBEC (CP) — A diver said Monday the dredge Manseau 101, which sank Sept. 30 killing 11 men, had a hole about four or five inches wide in its hold.

Record Majority Near for Holt

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI)—Prime Minister Harold Holt's coalition government appeared to be moving toward an all-time record majority Monday as the vote-counting in Saturday's elections continued.

The seats of at least three more members of the Labor opposition appeared in serious danger. However, one Labor rebel, Captain Sam Benson, who was expelled from the party in August for supporting government Viet Nam policy, appears likely to retain his seat as an independent by a narrow margin.

If the rebel wins and the government wins all the contests now classified as "doubtful," the Liberal party would have 64 seats and their partners in the coalition, the Country Party, 21. The Labor party would have only 38 members sitting on the opposition benches.

The big question remains the fate of aging Labor leader Arthur Calwell, who said earlier this year he would not contest the party's leadership if defeated in the general elections. However, Calwell, 70, has not made a statement about this promise since Saturday's elections. He was scheduled to address the National Press Club here Tuesday but no one knows if he will.

UN Door Closing On China

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The General Assembly appeared Monday to be on the verge of closing its doors on the Communist Chinese for another year.

A week-long debate on an Albanian-Cambodian resolution which would admit the Communists from Peking and kick out the Nationalist Chinese was expected to end today.

The delegates in the 121-country assembly then would vote on that resolution and one from Italy which would send the whole matter to a committee for a year's study.

Before then the committee was expected to approve a United States motion declaring the Albanian resolution an important issue requiring a two-thirds majority to pass.

But it was expected the bid to seat Peking would fall short even of a simple majority.

U.S. Favors Christmas Cease-Fire

SAIGON (UPI)—U.S. Leaders have agreed to a Christmas ceasefire in the Viet Nam war proposed by the Viet Cong during the Christmas and New Year's holidays. American sources said Monday.

They said they did not like the idea of a truce but feel that to reject the offer of a halt in the war would invite criticism of American hopes for a permanent peace.

American sources said a formal announcement on the ceasefire this year will be made when it is decided how long the pause will be. The Americans are reported to favor a pause of 30 hours.

Husband Accused Of Murder

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—A U.S. air force sergeant, Cecil H. Keel, was charged with first degree murder Monday after officers found the nude body of his wife tied to a bed in the family home.

Detective Perry R. Miles identified the dead woman as Mrs. Delores Keel, 25. He said it appeared she had been strangled. "We found the body on the bed in the bedroom and found that a rope had been tied about the woman's neck with both ends secured under each side of the bed to the legs," Miles said.

"We were met at the house by the three Keel children, 19 months to six years."

Detective Harry Cockburn said a calm, husky man walked up to his desk at the police station about 9:45 a.m. Monday and said he had killed his wife.

The three youngsters were taken to Fairchild Air Force Base, west of here.

What's everybody in B.C. saying about this popular whisky?

Cheers. And you'll cheer too once you've tried Walker's Special Old. You'll like the mellow smoothness and the look of luxury. No wonder it's one of Canada's favourites.

What's your stand on registering life insurance policies to claim increased income tax deductions?

Mr. Vincent: If it's possible, I'm all for it!

Interviewer: It is. You can buy a policy now from The Mutual Life and ask them to register it with the Government. Within certain limits, the savings portion of your premium can then be deducted when you are making out your 1966 income tax return.

Mr. Vincent: What about the policies I own now?

Interviewer: They could also be registered, providing they are not term insurance policies.

Mr. Vincent: It seems to me that everybody should know about this!

Interviewer: You're right! Especially people who are building a pension for themselves. Many are buying new policies from The Mutual Life and are saving on their income tax in this way.

Mr. Vincent: Look, I'd like to check into this. Where can I get complete information?

Canadian Banks Prospered In Past Year

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

Any fears that the Canadian chartered banks failed to prosper and expand in 1966 are being set at rest as the annual reports for these institutions become available.

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce has enjoyed another very good year. Its net profit has risen to $24,773,739 ($3.51) from $23,803,858 ($3.34) a year ago.

Record figures were established in all major areas of the bank's business.

Total assets at Oct. 31 were $6,505,000,000, up 6.2 per cent from a year ago, and compared with $3,000,000 when the bank presented its first annual statement 100 years ago.

Total deposits rose 6.3 per cent to $6,024,672,264, while commercial and other current loans rose 9.7 per cent to $3,237,000,000, with 45 per cent of the total liabilities to the public in quick asset form.

BANK OF MONTREAL APPOINTMENT

Appointment of A. E. Walters as district manager for Bank of Montreal branches on Vancouver Island has been announced by A. John Ellis, general manager for British Columbia, in Vancouver.

Mr. Walters was formerly manager of the bank's main Victoria branch. He previously served extensively at offices throughout the province.

Mr. Walters, who will operate from headquarters to be established in his area, is one of six new district managers in the Bank of Montreal B.C. division.

The appointment of district managers is another step in the program to diversify authority, so as to give greater autonomy at the local level.

Brisbane Borrows Victoria Idea

Fence-painting contest spread from Victoria to Australia, thanks to mining engineer Ian Morley of Brisbane, who took back photos of painting on Victoria's museum-archives fences after visit last summer. Thousands turned out for recent Brisbane contest on fence which hides demolition site for new King George Square in that city. Competition was held by Brisbane newspaper. Pictures were sent by Mr. Morley to Victoria friend, Dr. A. Hartley Sargent of 3333 Henderson. (Courier-Mail)

Beards Defy Blade Brass

Razor-Makers Won't Shave

LONDON (AP)—The battle of the beards in a British razor factory ended in a standoff Monday.

Two bearded employees of the U.S.-owned Gillette plant in Reading refused to shave.

The lather came when plans were made for the two top executives of the company from the United States—Board Chairman Vincent Ziegler and President Stuart Hensley—to tour the plant.

The pair's foreman, Jim Cappell, said: "I was asked to ask them if they would mind shaving as we did feel these beards were a little unpatriotic."

Runaway Heifer Shot Down

VANCOUVER (CP)—A runaway heifer was shot to death Monday after terrorizing a three-block area of South Vancouver for 40 minutes.

The 1,100-pound animal escaped from a meat company truck.

"It was charging everybody in sight," a policeman said. Police used their cars to divert the runaway from pedestrians and managed to corner it in a vacant lot.

A stockman killed the animal with one shot from a .30-30 calibre rifle, from about 100 feet away.

Air Service to Mainland Resumed

Air service to the mainland resumed in full force Monday following the return of 5,200 members of the machinists' union to the job, Victoria's Air Canada, in a nager Stanley Mooney said.

Mr. Mooney said the full service from Victoria to Vancouver and Seattle resumed Monday morning. Mainland service was about 90 per cent resumed Monday and expected to be back in full operation by Wednesday.

NEW CONTRACT

The striking members of the International Association of Machinists went back to work Sunday with a new contract.

Terms of the contract, dated Nov. 1, call for a 20-per-cent wage increase, spread over 26 months, a seven-per-cent fringe benefit increase and more holidays.

The agreement increases the top pay rate for mechanics to $3.97 from $3.17, in three increments.

The general increase will be 12 per cent retroactive to Nov.

Plane Problems Plague Flights

MONTREAL (CP)—Air Canada, its labor problem under control, faced only weather and equipment troubles Monday in getting its planes back into the air.

The first aircraft off the ground was a Viscount turbo prop, flight 380 for Quebec City, which left Montreal with 10 passengers at 6:31 a.m.

The takeoff signalled an end to a 12-day strike—the first in the Crown corporation's 29-year history—of 5,200 members of the International Association of Machinists.

WEATHER HAIT

The first flight Monday was scheduled for 3 a.m., flight 718 for Goose Bay, Labrador, but weather conditions at Goose Bay forced its cancellation.

A Viscount carrying 28 passengers landed normally, but veered off the runway onto the grass at Toronto International Airport one hour after it took off for London, Ont. The plane returned after the pilot reported trouble.

A company spokesman said later the problem was a fractured hydraulic line which controls the nose-wheel steering.

SECOND PLANE

A Montreal-bound Vanguard with 86 passengers took off on schedule from Toronto at 6:45 a.m., but returned a few minutes later when its undercarriage refused to retract. Passengers were transferred to another plane.

A Montreal-New York flight was cancelled because of equipment problems.

Another New York-bound plane returned to Montreal with the same passengers aboard.

Jordan Denounces Outside Arab Critics

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — Loyal Arab Legionnaires backed by tanks Monday maintained an uneasy calm in riot-torn West Jordan as the Jordanian government denounced "armchair strategists" in other Arab nations who accused King Hussein of being too soft toward Israel.

All was reported quiet on the west bank of the Jordan river, formerly part of Palestine, where at least five persons were killed and many more wounded in anti-government rioting last week. Mobs demanding the overthrow of Hussein had rampaged through the streets of old Jerusalem, Nablus, Ramallah and other cities until dispersed by police and troops.

Winds Toughen Sunday's Races

Thirty-five-mile-an-hour winds separated the men from the buoys in yacht races held Sunday by the Royal Victoria Yacht Club and the Turkey Head Sailing Association.

A battle royal developed between the Conculine and the Saga off Sidney with the Conculine holding her lead in the RYVC race until the last mark, when she got caught on the wrong side of a tug and tow.

The Saga, who had split her mainsail, managed to forge ahead with her larger forestall, Don Lawson's Tepah, the winner, and the second-place Tandem, owned by Theo De La Mare, didn't come to life until the latter part of the race.

Viking, skippered by Ned Ashe and Jeremy Hewitt, took third place.

The Turkey Head race was won on corrected time by Brian Saunders in Shark 218.

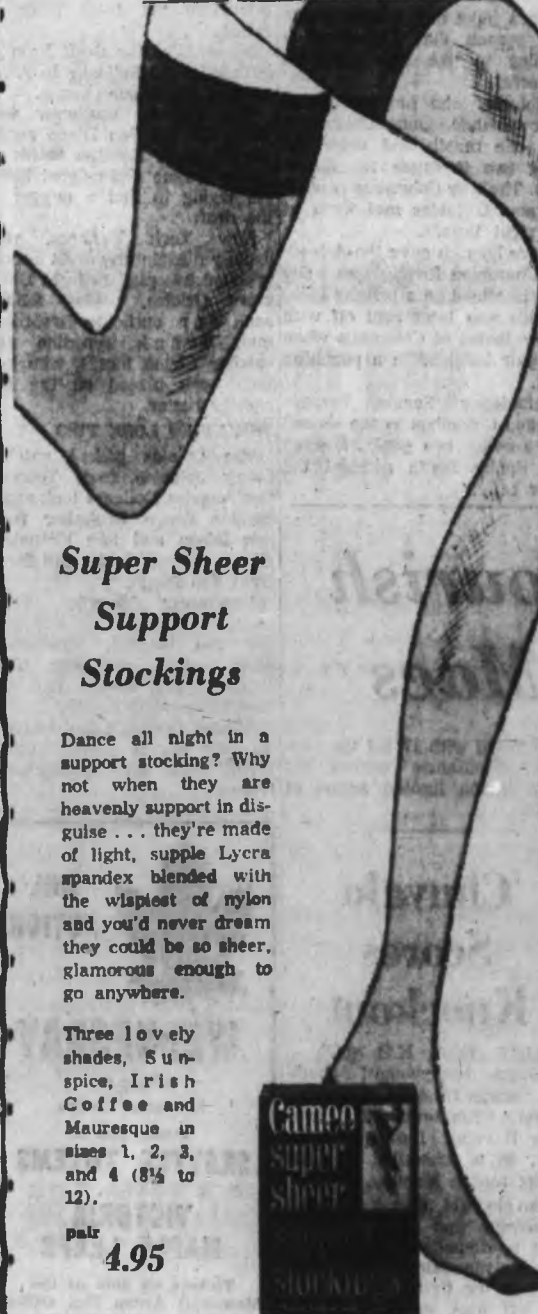

In second place was Peter Ferguson in Shark 206 with R. V. James in Lalanga running third.

The Lalanga was also the first boat over the line followed by Seamoke, skippered by Glen and Ralph Higgins.

Amendments On Way

Tories Map Medicare War

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative Opposition served notice Monday of a major assault on the Liberal government's medical care insurance bill.

Mr. Fulton maintained that welfare is clearly a field of provincial jurisdiction to be treasured upon by Ottawa only after consultation and with provincial consent.

Where does the word 'health' appear in the British North America Act? asked Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre).

"Well, now..." Mr. Fulton began.

"It is not there at all," interjected Mr. Knowles.

FORESTALL BID

"This kind of argument isn't going to advance us far," Mr. Fulton retorted. "Welfare services are in a field of provincial jurisdiction."

KNOWLES OBJECTS

Dr. Rynard attempted to forestall New Democrat amendments to the bill by reading one of his own. But Mr. Knowles objected that his party's spokesman, Dr. William Howe (NDP — Hamilton South), had one to strike out the universality clause—the one requiring 90 per cent of a province's population to be covered at the start.

Dr. Rynard indicated that the

Knockout in 14th Round

Carlos Ortiz Claims Title

Ortiz, who looked more like a middleweight than a 135-pounder against his frail-looking opponent, stretched the world junior light-weight king from the Philippines, in 2:01 of the 14th round of a title fight Monday night at Madison Square Garden.

The loser was stretched out on the ring floor for several seconds after referee Jimmy Delin counted him out. Then he was taken to a stool in a neutral corner while his handlers worked over him.

It was the first time in 96 fights that Elorde had been knocked off his feet, although he had been stopped three times on technical knockouts.

Giants, Redskins Combine For New Scoring Record

Washington Redskins set a new National Football League record on Sunday and New York Giants helped them establish a second new high in an almost unbelievable game won by the Redskins, 72-41.

Washington's 72 points topped the 70 scored by Los Angeles Rams against Baltimore Colts in 1950 and the two-team total of 113 points topped the 98 scored in 1948 when Chicago Cardinals defeated the Giants, 63-35.

The Washington total, however, was one point short of the 73 scored against the Redskins when they were blanked by Chicago Bears in the 1940 season. But that's a separate record.

Sunday's fan-shocker started innocently enough as the Redskins took a 13-0 lead in the first quarter on two touchdowns by A. D. Whitfield, only one converted by Charlie Gogolak.

From there, the clubs averaged more than two points a minute with five touchdowns in each of the second and fourth quarters and four in third quarter.

Defence-back Brig Owens was the chief Washington contributor. He scored once with a 62-yard run after recovering a fumble, once with a 60-yard punt after an interception and set up two more touchdowns with interceptions.

Although the two leagues, meeting separately Monday, did not take any action, there were indications the game would be played in the home stadium of Los Angeles Rams.

High Flying Chiefs Western Champions

Kansas City Chiefs were flying high Sunday when they learned they had won the American Football League's Western Division title, and they immediately got higher.

They were 18,000 feet up in a chartered aircraft over Elwood City, Penn., on their way home after a 32-24 win in New York over the Jets when word came through that Denver Broncos had upset San Diego Chargers, 20-17.

That meant the Chiefs were "in" and had no real worries now until the playoff game against the Eastern Division winners.

As a mighty cheer rocked the plane at the announcement, line-backer E. J. Holub started things by pouring a can of beer over coach Hank Stram's head.

From there, every container with liquid became a weapon as Stram and his players threw and poured it over each other.

Cajun Classic Decided With Two-Hole Playoff

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Jackie Cupit, a former PGA rookie of the year who hadn't won a tournament since 1964, defeated Chi-Chi Rodriguez on the second hole of a playoff Sunday to win the Cajun golf classic.

Cupit and Rodriguez had finished the 72 holes tied with record-breaking 17-under-par 271s. Rodriguez made up three strokes on the last day with a 68 but missed his chance at his first PGA tournament victory when he hit a trap with his second shot on the second extra hole and took a bogey five.

Cupit won $4,850, Rodriguez pocketed $3,100 and Dan Sikes, who was third with a 273, won $2,200.

Dave Hill was fourth with 274, Wright Garrett and Dave Stockton tied for fifth at 275; Gardner Dickinson was seventh with 276 and Doug Sanders, John Josephson, Jack McGowan, Johnny Potts and Bert Yancey shared eighth place at 278.

The Iron Man, the Super Man Both Titles Apply to Heberton

By BRIAN DOHERTY

Andy Heberton has earned titles galore in his professional hockey career spanning 16 years. He's been called the Quiet Man, the Iron Man, the Super Man.

He's earned them all. Wednesday night he will play his 1,007th successive game of professional hockey.

All hockey will salute his once-in-a-lifetime achievement with a special "Andy Heberton Night" Wednesday when the Victoria Maple Leafs meet Seattle Totems in Memorial Arena.

There will be speeches, presentations and a few surprises. Andy Heberton last missed a regular game on March 3, 1952, when the then Victoria Cougars blanked Tacoma, 2-0.

"I missed three games then," recalled Heberton. "But I can't remember what the injury was."

He has played games suffering from a variety of minor injuries. The closest he got to missing a game was when he was with the New York Rangers.

"I got hit in the eye with a stick in a Wednesday game in New York and we had to go to Montreal for a Thursday night game," he said.

Bucks Stage Rally Earn Tie with Blades

strong the only goals he was to need.

Portland Buckaroos, playing their fourth game in five nights, managed to stage a third-period rally Sunday night in Los Angeles and tacked a point onto their Western Hockey League lead.

Down, 0-3, against the Blades, the Buckaroos started their comeback when Cliff Schmutz scored at 10:15 of the final period and pulled even on Connie Madigan's goal just 28 seconds from time. Neither club could manage to score in the overtime.

In Sunday's other game, Seattle Totems knocked over the speedy Vancouver Canucks, 5-1, in Seattle to drop Canucks nine points behind the Buckaroos with three games in hand.

Ex-Canuck Howie Hughes scored twice in the first period to give Seattle- rookie Jim Armstrong a 2-0 lead.

Baseball Meeting Sees Pirates Busy

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates, who lost their chance at the National League championship last season because of a shortage of pitching, moved to remedy the situation Monday during the first day of major-league baseball's annual winter meeting.

"I never paid much attention to it until this year," he said. He had his share of luck in keeping the run going.

"When I've been hurt, we've had two or three days' break," he keeps in condition in summer conditioning with a local firm which, he says, helps to keep his legs strong.

He has had few regrets in hockey. One is that he never played in a Stanley Cup. New York made the semi-finals four times but never got any further.

ONE YEAR After eight seasons with New York he went to Boston for a year. Then it was to Portland in the 1954-55 season.

"I think I should have played one more year with Boston," Heberton said. "They were in trouble when they let me go."

"I heard they let me go because my legs were finished," he said. Asked about the label, the Quiet Man, Heberton replied: "I don't go looking for trouble — but just once in a while ..."

"I haven't always been that way. When I first started out I had 81 minutes in penalties to lead the team (in 1951-52 with Victoria)."

"But I didn't score many goals. You waste too much time in the penalty box. That way you're hurting the team and yourself."

AND HOW MANY MORE years did he think he had in hockey? "I'll wait and see about the NHL expansion. At my age (37) they might not give me a look in."

But he left no doubt that he would welcome one more call to the majors.

Andrew Alex Heberton was born in Winnipeg Oct. 3, 1923. In 1950-51 he was a big hit with the Cougars when he formed the "kid-line" with Reg Abbott and Bob Frampton.

He is the most liked and respected player on the Leafs' team and the Western League. He won the most gentlemanly awards in the NHL in 1957 when with the Rangers and in the WHL in 1964-65 season while with Portland.

He is married to the former Gail Beveridge and has three children, Clayton, Terry and Karen.

Simon Fraser had earlier dumped Vancouver IGA, the other team in the tournament, 91-63, and for Macs to get a bye they will have to defeat the Grocers by 50 points.

Victoria became the first team to come within 20 points of the Simon Fraser squad which is built around scholarship players including Brian McKenzie, former Oak Bay High School star.

Macs outscored the university team in the second half and except for the opening few minutes of the game when Simon Fraser jumped into a 18-5 lead there was little to choose between the two clubs.

Playing coach Darrell Lorrimer led the Macs with 18 points followed by Ken Gregory and Ron Bowker with 13.

The Pirates obtained left-hander Juan Pizarro from Chicago White Sox in the only major transaction of the day other than the 21 players picked up in the draft.

Pizarro had a 19-9 record with the White Sox in 1964 but arm trouble has held down his production for the past two seasons. He completed only one game last season while compiling an 8-6 record.

Another deal, reported near completion, was being brewed by Minnesota Twins and Atlanta Braves.

TWINS READY The Twins are said to be ready to trade right-hander Jim "Mudcat" Grant and to be interested in Atlanta-shortstop Woody Woodward and relief-pitcher Clay Carroll. It is also said that the Twins will deal right-hander Camilo Pascual if they can get their price in talent.

Meanwhile, the draft brought left-hander Bo Belinsky back for another big-league chance.

The colorful southpaw was taken off the San Diego roster for $25,000 by Houston Astros as major league clubs spent $389,000 trying to find a nugget in the draft.

New York Yankee, who usually disdain any draft action, grabbed two players from Baltimore Orioles, paying $25,000 each for outfielder-first-baseman Frank Tepedino and catcher Chuck Sands, who had both been placed on the Rochester roster.

Mounties LOSE TWO The Orioles picked catcher Larry Johnson from Toronto, Los Angeles Dodgers took right-hander Bruce Brubaker from San Diego and San Francisco Giants took outfielder Bill Sorell from San Diego.

Vancouver Mounties, farm team for Kansas City Athletics, lost two players. New York Mets picked outfielder Tom Reynolds and Boston Red Sox took pitcher Bill Landis.

Atlanta Braves asked waivers on Joey Jay in preparation to giving him his unconditional release.

Early Flourish Downs Macs

VANCOUVER—Simon Fraser opened up an early lead and held on to defeat Victoria Coffee Macs, 71-63, Sunday, to almost assure themselves a bye in the second round of the tournament to choose the B.C. men's basketball representative for the winter games in Quebec.

Chualvo Scores Knockout

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Canadian heavyweight champion George Chualvo of Toronto scored a second-round TKO over Dave Russell of Unkondale, N.Y., in a scheduled 10-round boxing match Monday.

Chualvo, 214, had a 27-punch advantage and used a moid fight to demolish Russell, who took the mandatory eight count twice in the first.

A left hook dropped Russell for the last time before referee Max Kadon stopped the fight at 2:52.

Paid attendance was more than 3,000.

Trade Winds Blowing 'Tween East—West

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver newspaper says the British Columbia Lions have traded defensive end Dick Fouts and halfback Bill Symons to Toronto Argonauts for the Canadian rights to halfback Jim Young.

The newspaper says the deal is expected to be announced officially "any day now."

The B.C. club declined to comment.

Fouts is a five-year veteran with the Lions. Symons joined the club in mid-season this year after being cut by the Green Bay Packers.

Young, a 210-pound Canadian halfback from Queen's University, is the property of the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League.

Lions would have to get Young from the Vikings, and the newspaper says "a popular theory" is that the B.C. club will attempt to trade halfback-flanker Willie Fleming for him.

'Riots Must Cease' —Government Leaders

VANCOUVER (CP) — Civic and provincial leaders agreed Monday that Vancouver must put an end to Grey Cup riots like the one which coursed through the downtown area Friday night and early Saturday.

But they couldn't agree on any solution.

Proposals ranged from banning further Canadian Football League games in Vancouver to returning the pre-game parade to Saturday morning.

The parade was staged Friday night for the first time.

Police said Grey Cup troubles almost tripled their work for a normal weekend. They said a total of 689 persons were arrested for trouble they blamed on Grey Cup.

Mayor William Rathie and Herb Capozzi, Social Credit MLA and retiring B.C. Lions general manager, appeared the only dissenting voices in not blaming the parade for the Friday night riot.

Mr. Rathie said the issue must still be evaluated and Mr. Capozzi said other events should be scheduled for Grey Cup eve to keep up the interest of persons attracted to the downtown area.

Evan Wolfe, also a Social Credit MLA, said the riot of 5,000 persons led him to believe Vancouver should not play host to further Grey Cup games.

During the riot, blamed on Vancouver residents by Mr. Rathie who said out-of-town football fans were not involved, looting raged down the main street and in the downtown area.

Garage cars, smashed shopfront windows and debris about 200 policemen for four hours before order was restored.

FOUR UNDER 15

There were only four persons arrested who were under the age of 15.

A 22-year-old man from St. James, Man., was the only out-of-province resident arrested among the 152 charged with unlawful assembly. Most arrested were in their early 20s.

Most persons arrested for drunkenness were of an older age group, ranging up to 60 years.

A Vancouver newspaper said in a frontpage editorial that the riot "was as close to anarchy as the city has come since the unemployment riots of the hungry Thirties."

"It had all the raw terrifying ugliness of mob hysteria," the paper says. "Only in this case it was the hysteria of a mob that hadn't the faintest notion of what it was rioting about."

It called for an example to be made of the trouble-makers and said the riot showed Vancouver "clearly is not mature enough to host another Grey Cup."

REGINA (CP) — Only one word describes the reception accorded the champion Saskatchewan Roughriders Sunday on their return from Vancouver with the club's first Grey Cup: pandemonium.

Pandemonium reigned as 6,000 fans jammed Regina's armories for three hours prior to the team's arrival by plane.

Arriving at 9:30 a.m. CST an official ceremony lasted only 30 minutes but the noise was far greater than that generated in the preceding three-hour waiting period.

FANS COLLAPSE

Fans collapsed as they jammed shoulder to shoulder in the building. Many had arrived as early as 6 p.m. to welcome their heroes who were originally scheduled to arrive at 8:15. A corps of about 12 St. John's Ambulance personnel, who had not officially been asked to attend, treated at least 15 persons who collapsed during the evening's activity.

The team, led by seven pipers who were drowned out by the excited fans, entered the building behind the coveted Grey Cup, emblematic of Canadian professional football supremacy, which was carried by two club officials.

BUY NOW

After the team received a three-minute ovation, each player individually and in a closing mode urged the fans to buy tickets for next season as soon as possible "because next year we're going to be playing exciting football."

Speaking to the fans in the face of signs which read,

"welcome home Grey Cup," and "we're the greatest," and one reading, "Eagle Keys for mayor," quarterback Ron Lancaster said, "the only thing I can tell you is what you said all year — we had them all the way."

The Roughies downed Ottawa Rough Riders 28-14 for the cup.

Defensive tackle Reg Whitehouse said the victory was "the greatest moment of my life." A home brew, Whitehouse also told the wildly cheering fans, "I want to get home and go to bed. I've been partying all night."

During entertainment provided by a rock and roll band and a western music band before the team's arrival, many children became separated from their parents in the crowd and many young people took advantage of the music to dance in an area not more than one foot square.

Saskatchewan's public works minister, Wilf Gardiner, caught in the middle of a surging throng in the centre of the floor, obviously was enjoying every moment.

Two fans, one atop the shoulders of the other, waved an imitation, silver paper-covered model of the Grey Cup, inscribed, "Go Go Green," and one young girl had a sign as big as herself reading, "The East was a feast for the best in the West."

Premier Ross Thatcher, who received a disapproving reception from the crowd not in the mood to hear from politicians said, "this is a miracle in the league. We are so much smaller than the other centres."

There were plenty of blood-hot eyes in the crowd as many people recuperated from Saturday night Grey Cup parties.

On completion of the game watched by thousands of Regina fans on television, the downtown area came alive as people drove downtown blowing their car horns without letup.

There were impromptu street dances, and at least one beer parlor closed at 9:30 p.m., 90 minutes early because, as one spokesman put it, "We were scared of a riot."

Following the introduction and ovation for the players, the crowd started to disperse.

Even the Losers Welcomed Back

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders got a surprise heroes' reception by about 125 hardy fans today as they returned from Vancouver after losing 28-14 to Saskatchewan Roughriders in the Grey Cup final Saturday.

It was a tired and dejected group of players that got off a chartered plane at 5:30 a.m. EST, and most of them thought of nothing but a quick trip home in the dark and several hours sleep.

EMBARRASSED SMILES

But as they entered the terminal to wait for their luggage and customs clearance they stared in disbelief, then broke into embarrassed smiles as they saw the banner-waving fans. Most of them were teenagers who had been at the airport since 2:30 a.m. waiting for the team to complete the final leg of a three-stage flight from Vancouver via Seattle and Chicago.

Quarterback Russ Jackson got the biggest ovation but the fans cheered everybody.

Chants of "We want Russ" filled the terminal corridor as Jackson was waiting for his luggage and when he finally stepped through the door he was mobbed and kissed by a half-dozen shrieking girls.

Most of the Ottawa party took a U.S. scheduled flight from Vancouver to Seattle Sunday afternoon then switched to another scheduled flight to Chicago where a chartered plane was waiting. But other small groups left in the morning by plane and bus for Seattle then took an early flight to Chicago and waited there almost five hours for the others.

Fans who didn't get to the airport will be able to see the team tonight at a parade and reception organized by the city.

Errant Trip A Hoax

TORONTO (CP) — Bellboys did a double-take Saturday when a mud-plattered bus pulled up at a downtown hotel and 40 alleged Saskatchewan Roughriders fans piled out to see the Grey Cup game.

When the youthful fans were told the game was getting under way in Vancouver, they shook their heads, climbed back into the bus and disappeared.

The hoax was engineered by some fast-talking college students, who claimed they came from Estevan, Sask.

Semi-Pro League May Receive Help

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ted Workman of Montreal, president of the Canadian Football League, said Friday the league will "adopt" the semi-pro Atlantic Conference in the New England section of the United States as a farm league next season.

Workman said details have not been worked out but the Atlantic Conference had "expressed a willingness" to operate with the CFL in developing players.

He said final decisions on the working agreement would be made after talks between Ron O'Quinn, Ottawa Rough Riders

Nixons Up Juvenile Hockey Lead

VICTORIA NIXONS edged a determined Alberni club, 5-4, Sunday in Vancouver Island Juvenile Hockey League play at Alberni, to extend their unbeaten string to eight games.

Dave Williams paced the win with two goals. Gord McRae, Bob Emms and newcomer Dave Steingard scored singles. Lou Vermette notched two goals for Alberni with Lorne Smith and Lon Miles scoring singletons.

In Sunday's other game, Terry Mitchell scored three goals at Esquimalt as Nanaimo downed McLaren, 6-2, to move Navy at Naden in the only other first division match played. Uni-

Rangers Adopt New Look They're Winning

Next games: Tomorrow—Montreal at Toronto; New York at Chicago.

New York Rangers don't look much different, on paper that is, than the club which wound up the last National Hockey League season in last place but something seems to have changed them.

After opening this season 2-5-2, the Rangers lost only one of their next nine games and they moved into a second-place tie over the weekend by polishing off the two leaders.

TRIMMED HAWKS
After blowing over Chicago Black Hawks, 4-1, on Saturday, the Blueshirts completed their double by whitewashing Toronto's Maple Leafs, 5-0, in New York on Sunday.

Fine goalkeeping by Ed Giacomin, a new aggressive defenseman, the addition of Bernie Geoffrion and a healthy Rod Gilbert all have helped in the Ranger drive.

On Sunday, pugacious Reg Fleming had a first-period fight with Kent Douglas, then came out in the second period to score goals 30 seconds apart to turn a 2-0 game into a 4-0 affair which left the Leafs without much chance.

In Sunday's other game, the Hawks maintained their lead at three points by edging Boston Bruins, 5-4.

Bruins played without Bobby

Orr, who suffered a knee injury on Saturday, and lost centre Murray Oliver in the third period when one of Bobby Hull's shots broke a toe. Orr's injury is not considered serious and the 18-year-old defenseman is expected back for Thursday's game in Detroit.

Clay Receives Offer

DETROIT (AP)—A woman fight promoter, backed by a Detroit sportsclub, Saturday offered Cassius Clay $250,000 to defend his heavyweight championship against Ernie Terrell here.

In Miami, Clay's trainer, Chris Dundee, said the Clay camp was considering the offer. Terrell, World Boxing Association champion, already has agreed to the fight, said Mrs. Jean Wilson of the E. and J. Sporting Club.

She said the proposed title bout would be held Feb. 6 at Olympia Stadium, a covered structure which seats about 15,000 for hockey games.

Mrs. Wilson said lawyers for the Detroit group would meet with Clay next week.

B.C. Skier Takes Third Place

KELOWNA (CP)—A 14-year-old Kelowna boy won a third-place spot during the weekend at the North and South American invitational water ski championships in Mexico.

George Athans, youngest member of the Canadian team and the only member from the west, took third place in the stiff competition of the open slalom event.

"The Bank's" 1966

PLAIN WORDS

Annual Statements and Balance Sheets sometimes seem as though they were drawn up only for the trained eyes of accountants and financial experts. For those of our customers, shareholders and friends who are neither of these, we present the highlights of our 1966 operations, compared with those of the previous year, in plain, straightforward terms:

Funds entrusted to us:

In personal accounts used mainly to accumulate savings
In business accounts to meet payrolls, purchase materials, pay taxes and other obligations

Commitments made to assist customers in their foreign and domestic trade transactions and miscellaneous accounts payable
Funds supplied by shareholders to provide banking offices and equipment and as a reserve to protect our customers' funds

Total funds available for investment

These funds were employed as follows:

Cash resources—to meet the daily withdrawal of funds by customers

Call loans and Government of Canada securities available to provide additional cash at short notice

Funds lent to provinces, municipalities and corporations by investing in their securities

Funds lent to enable customers to acquire their own homes under the provisions of the National Housing Act, 1954

Loans made to our customers to finance their business operations and for their personal needs

Land, buildings and equipment needed to provide our customers with convenient and efficient facilities at our 680 branches

Other assets—mainly customers' commitments to "The Bank" covering foreign and domestic trade transactions

Total funds employed

Funds entrusted to us:
In personal accounts used mainly to accumulate savings	$1,207,480,124	$1,145,678,271
In business accounts to meet payrolls, purchase materials, pay taxes and other obligations	1,432,023,319	1,495,114,376
Commitments made to assist customers in their foreign and domestic trade transactions and miscellaneous accounts payable	2,839,503,643	2,640,592,647
Funds supplied by shareholders to provide banking offices and equipment and as a reserve to protect our customers' funds	104,796,166	91,318,464
Total funds available for investment	130,314,304	126,079,470
These funds were employed as follows:
Cash resources—to meet the daily withdrawal of funds by customers	$532,776,005	$444,171,301
Call loans and Government of Canada securities available to provide additional cash at short notice	563,284,883	597,073,517
Funds lent to provinces, municipalities and corporations by investing in their securities	193,595,976	185,290,787
Funds lent to enable customers to acquire their own homes under the provisions of the National Housing Act, 1954	95,796,589	95,954,247
Loans made to our customers to finance their business operations and for their personal needs	1,542,887,225	1,416,422,453
Land, buildings and equipment needed to provide our customers with convenient and efficient facilities at our 680 branches	21,883,352	31,685,556
Other assets—mainly customers' commitments to "The Bank" covering foreign and domestic trade transactions	106,390,085	87,392,720
Total funds employed	$3,076,614,115	$2,857,990,581

That in simple terms sets out our position as at October 31, 1966. A measure of our progress is the fact that we moved into the $3 billion bank category, total assets increasing by $219 millions or 8 per cent. Profits after taxes and all charges amounted to $10,892,656, equivalent to $3.63 per share as compared with $3.30 a share in the 1965 fiscal year. This amounts to less than 0.4 per cent of the total funds employed. It was a good year for our customers and our shareholders, to whom we extend our thanks for their continuing confidence. It was a good year, too, because of the devotion and teamwork of our thousands of employees across Canada...good reason for us to feel assured that...

Tenant Vote Council Aim

By A. H. MURPHY
City Hall Reporter

The whole base of municipal franchise should be broadened, in the opinion of a majority of Victoria aldermen.

It should be made easier for tenants to vote on all civic issues and there should be few restrictions on their standing for office, they say.

Another reform which will be advocated by the city, in a brief to be presented on Dec. 5 before a provincial committee, would see money bylaw votes decided on the basis of a simple majority rather than a majority of 60 per cent as at present.

There was not unanimity in discussion of the brief Monday and a special committee, consisting of the city manager and two aldermen, was appointed to crystallize aldermanic opinion for presentation.

CONCEPTS CHANGING

The brief will set out the city's position on 19 suggested changes to the Municipal Act as proposed at the Union of B.C. Municipalities' convention in Penticton last September.

Commenting on the proposition that all electors should be eligible to vote on all municipal matters, and that the franchise should not be restricted to property holders, Ald. Hugh Stephen said that old concepts were changing.

Tenants could vote in city elections now if they registered as electors, but the vast majority of them did not. The reform advocated by the city would make it unnecessary for them to do this and, consequently, greatly enlarge the pool of voters.

RIGHT TO VOTE

Ald. Stephen pointed out that in Victoria there were many retired people who lived in apartments. In many cases they would spend the remainder of their lives as apartment dwellers and there was no reason, really, why they should be deprived of the right to vote.

"The argument is often advanced that the ownership of property gives an elector a sense of responsibility, but this concept is not valid any more, in my opinion," Ald. Stephen said. "There is just no reason to say tenants are not responsible people," he added.

'NOT INTERESTED'

"Most tenants knew they could vote if they registered, but they just weren't interested enough to do so," Ald. Clyde Savage commented.

The question of a simple majority deciding any referendum was strongly supported in council.

"This is a simple democratic principle—that 51 per cent of the electorate has the last say—and it's one we should put into practice," Ald. Michael Griffin said.

BORROWING POWERS

The city brief will urge that council's powers to borrow money, without consent of the electorate, be widened.

It will suggest that municipalities be allowed to borrow for such things as installation, extension or reconstruction of water, drainage or sewer systems, improvement of roads and sidewalks, and construction of service buildings.

In addition council would, if the act were changed, be required to think at least five years ahead in capital budgeting. This would mean that all times construction programs would be projected at least five years into the future.

HOURS AVOIDED

Victoria aldermen steered away from a proposal which would have the effect of regulating store hours.

It was pointed out, in a comment by the city manager, that the principle of unregulated hours was adopted in Victoria many years ago and the city council had no desire to renew discussion on the question.

The Victoria brief will ask that provincial legislation be passed to enable municipalities to levy business tax on credit unions on the grounds that in many cases they conduct business like any other firm.

Woman Hurt In Collision

A woman was treated at St. Joseph's Hospital Monday night for minor leg injuries and shock suffered in a two-car crash on Burnside. Police said Joanne Vanburkirk, 206 Cadillac, was passenger in a car driven by Mary P. Hewitt, 39, of 219 West Burnside.

Sunday Sports Due?

City council Monday went along with the idea of Sunday sport for Victoria, providing the ratepayers put their seal of approval in a referendum.

In a brief to be presented to a committee from the provincial government and the Union of B.C. Municipalities, the city will propose that the Municipal Act be altered to allow the charging of an admission fee for sporting events and other types of entertainment. Ald. Robert Baird was the one city father who came out flatly against Sunday sport.

"One of the big troubles in the world today — one of the reasons we are so confused and anxious — is that we are not keeping Sunday properly. This is a day which should be devoted to rest and relaxation. A day of rest is what we need most, and I'm flatly against Sunday sport," the alderman said. "Well, I certainly don't agree," countered Ald. Michael Griffin. "I went out and spent a dollar yesterday and sat and watched my boy play football — after, I might add, we went to church as a family in the morning — and this is the best kind of relaxation I can get."

"What are we going to do? Are we going back to the old, dark days and sit in the parlor on Sundays with the shades all pulled down?" he asked.

The whole discussion was academic, in the opinion of Ald. Geoffrey Edgell. The province had the ruling hand in such matters. Council could, however, put the question to the people and should do so.

"It's the thin edge of the wedge, and I don't like it," said Ald. Baird.

What's in a Name?

Arguments, Battles Balanced by Darlings

By KEN WARREN

Is the difference between love and war a case of Kiss or Kuss?

The new Victoria telephone directory lists the ingredients for war. There is Mr. Argument, several Battles and a Battle. Also Messrs. Challenger and Bitterman. As well as Pain, Muddle, Loveless and Mess.

On the other hand, however, we have Charity, And Friend, Love, Peace and Makepeace.

On the subject of love — the marriage kind — we have numerous Darlings, three Doves, a Dear and a Virgin. Add now a Smoochy and a Gentleman. There are numerous Woots, three Ticksles, four Otfers — and finally, a Yop, 126 Belts and the Spouses.

Speaking of children, there is a Suck and an Ouch.

And when Mr. Oakes is tracing his family tree, should he assume the family began with a Mr. Seeds or a Mr. Acorn?

Famous men? Bernard Shaw, Rudyard Kipling, Lou Riel, James Bond and 103 Kings, with King William listed as last in succession, are all in the directory.

There are 31 Birds listed, as well as Mr. Feather, Egg, Eggman, Buzzard, Parrot, Partridge, Heron, Sparrow and several Wings.

Or how about Mr. Bacon, Mr. Egg and the Fry?

Where did the "in" language originate? From the telephone directory, of course. There are listings for Flak, Bark, Gush, Rank, Ball, Banger, Droppers, Chuck and Boogars.

Finally, there are several Chins, as well as Toots, Beard, Noseworthy and Haire. Also Brain, Hands, Knee, Kneebone, Stern, Head, Leg and Barefoot — and even one Bared!

Here's something that will bring out the Irish in Victoria's reputedly dominant English population. There are only 21 English families in the area as compared to 135 Scots.

And this noted city of gardens, oddly enough, has no Gardeners.

We have a Mr. Lean and a Mr. Stout; Inch, Foot and Yard; Long, Small and Short; Tallboy and Lightbody.

There is also a Mr. Big Canoe, several Rafts and a Barge.

And Beer, Bender and Bekker — and several Pick-ups.

Saying Goodbye Sad Part of Trip

By TRUDY KEMP

Hundreds of new friends and many happy memories sum up six months of travelling around Europe by train, car, plane, hitchhiking and "shanks pony" for two attractive young Vancouver Islanders.

Some 1,800 colored slides will help keep the memories alive for the Misses Pat Lebold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Lebold, 415 Raynor Avenue, and Linda Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Young, Parksville.

"Sadder part of the whole trip were the goodbyes," Pat remarked.

"We must have met hundreds of kids in our travels and it was so hard to say goodbye knowing we would probably never meet again," added Linda.

Up until five months before they left on their European trip Linda, who works in a Victoria office, and Pat, a dental assistant, were strangers. They were introduced by a mutual friend, and soon found out they had the same goal in mind — to tour Europe and to see everything there was to see.

They explained that they had both been saving money for about two years so that they would have enough to tour the way they wanted.

"We didn't want to have to stop and work during the tour," Linda said.

The girls left Vancouver April 19 on the Canberra for Europe by way of the Panama and before they returned home they had visited 24 different countries.

Shortly after disembarking at Le Havre they left for Paris where they spent seven "wonderful" days.

"Paris is fabulous," exclaimed Linda. "Of all the cities we visited, Paris, to me, has the most atmosphere. There was so much to do and the French people have such a wonderful, nonchalant outlook on life."

Next on their agenda was a month-long tour of the Scandinavian countries.

"Norway is really beautiful. It reminded us so much of western Canada with its mountains and trees," said Pat.

"The people are extremely friendly in Denmark and in Holland, too," Linda remarked. The girls travelled a great deal on a Eurail pass through Europe. The pass enabled them to travel first class on all the trains in Europe except in Communist countries. They also travelled by car, bus and plane and did some hitchhiking along with other people their own age.

"We met a lot of American students and young people from Australia and New Zealand. We are now writing to quite a number of them," said the two travellers.

Attending the Le Mans 24-hour car races at Le Mans, France, and having a ride in the first two winning cars was "one of the biggest thrills" of their whole trip.

Linda and Pat explained that they had met some of the pit mechanics for Ford and following the races were their guests at a banquet where they met in person some of the drivers.

Reading like a travel folder the next portion of their trip included visits to Portugal, Spain, the French Riviera, Switzerland, Austria, Italy, Greece and Turkey, coming back through Bulgaria and Yugoslavia to Germany.

While in Germany they visited East Berlin and found it the most depressing part of their tour.

"We counted our blessings when we returned from East Berlin," Linda emphasized.

While in Rome they attended the opera Aida, performed among the ruins of the ancient Roman baths.

"It was spectacular," was their mutual comment.

"There was so much to see while we were in Italy. We were on the go from early morning to dinner time," they said.

The girls then went by air to London where they stayed for about 10 days. While there they met some of their shipboard companions from Australia and New Zealand. Between them they hired a van and the 16 friends returned to Munich to attend the Oktober Beer Festival. The group camped in a huge army tent at the lakeside, the local camp grounds at Munich.

They agreed that the 10 days spent at the festival was the "most fun of the entire trip on the continent."

The girls returned to London and during the last two weeks of their tour each went their own way. Linda took a trip to Scotland and back to London for a few days before returning home in the Orcaades. Pat visited Ireland and Scotland, returning to Montreal from London by air.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing in regard to "Nervous First Baseman," the kid whose mother went to all the Little League games and yelled obscenities at the manager.

When I was in high school I played right guard on the football team. I used to die a thousand deaths when my dad would come to see me play which was often. He was always yelled to the eyeballs and his language was terrible. He walked along the side-lines yelling advice and cursing out the players. Everyone laughed. I wanted to drop in a hole and stay there.

My coach was a wonderful person. When I wanted to quit he wouldn't let me. He explained that everybody in the world has something to put up with, and my problem was my dad.

I hope the Little Leaguer will just keep on doing his best, and married to another wonderful man. My first husband's mother and sister include us in all their social plans and of course, Jack and I must reciprocate. Without realizing it, they make frequent references to incidents involving me and my first husband. I know it is upsetting to Jack and I can understand his feelings.

I can't ask these people please stop talking about the past. I'd rather die than hurt them. This situation is clearly damaging my marriage. What can I do? — NEED A SOLUTION

Dear Need: Cultivate other friends and cut back on the family get-togethers. Why don't you visit the women during the afternoon? It would let them know you still want to be friendly, and at the same time it would protect your husband's feelings.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has a quirk about "bar gains." He thinks he is being economical, but often his tight streaks end up costing us money. He will buy almost anything if he has a coupon that will save him seven cents on the purchase price.

We bought hospitalization insurance for the whole family a few months ago and he thinks that every time any of us has a cold or a backache we should go to the hospital. He says it is cheaper than calling a doctor who charges $20 for a house call and then prescribes $15 worth of medicine.

If you can suggest a cure for this overly frugal husband of mine I would appreciate it. — DARLING CLEMENTINE

Dear Darling: The coupon types are incurable, so give up. But the hospital routine is nonsense. No one should go to a hospital unless his doctor sends him. (For heaven's sake, don't buy any burial insurance!)

Russell-Fleming Vows

Carries Heirloom Brooch In Bouquet of Roses

An heirloom brooch nestled in the crescent bouquet of red roses and heather carried by Diane Margaret Fleming, when she exchanged vows in a double ring ceremony with Malcolm McMillan Russell in Fairfield United Church.

Baskets of white chrysanthemums and red carnations flanked the altar when Rev. H. W. Kerley united in marriage the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Fleming, 163 Olive Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Russell, 1268 Moorose Avenue.

Traditional organ music was played while the bride entered the church on the arm of her father. Her full length A-line gown of white embroidered peau de soie, had a bateau neckline, lily point sleeves and a floor-length train. The four-tiered scalloped veil misted to her shoulders from a satin ring headpiece.

Miss Beverly Lloyd was maid of honor and the Misses Mary Russell and Catherine Fleming, sisters of the principals, and Sandra Muir, bride's cousin, were bridesmaids. The Misses Patricia and Elizabeth Parsons were flower girls for their cousin.

The attendants were gown-ed alike in floor-length, red velvet dresses. They wore matching handkerchiefs of red velvet flowers and tulle and for jewelry, crystal necklaces — a gift of the bride. They carried colonial bouquets of white carnations.

Mr. Steve Bryant was best man and ushering guests to their seats were Mr. Jack Fleming, Mr. Pete Strickland, and Mr. John Ozard. As the couple were leaving the church, Mr. Malcolm Finlayson played the bagpipes.

The reception was held at Holyrood House where the bride's table was centred with a three-tiered cake and flanked by roses and silver candelabra. Rev. Kerley said grace and the toast to the bride was given by Mr. Alfred Adamson.

Leaving on her honeymoon the bride wore a two-piece, winter white outfit with fur collar, matching pill-box hat and brown accessories. The bride presented her bouquet to Mrs. Nan Bower for her mother, Mrs. N. Stott, who was unable to attend the reception.

Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. G. Muir and daughters Sandra and Bonnie, Mr. and Mrs. W. Finlayson and son Malcolm, Mr. and Mrs. A. Murray and daughter Cathie, Mrs. A. Finlayson, Mrs. M. Kendrick, all of Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. F. Varney, Courtenay, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Swaik, Port Alberni.

Capote, Friends

Author's Party Dazzler

NEW YORK (UPI) — Best-selling author Truman Capote invited the rich, celebrated, beautiful and social of two continents to a masked ball Monday night that made social history before the first guest appeared.

Never in recent years has a private party received so much publicity although ostensibly no press agent was involved. Strict security measures were ordered at the Hotel Plaza, some of the elegant $30,000 lease, to keep crashers, photographers and all but a few reporters from mixing with the 500 guests in the ballroom.

Hundreds of persons, including celebrities who knew Capote slightly or not at all, applied to him for invitations and were turned down. The invited guests jetted in from such diverse points as Rome, Hollywood, Venice, Washington, Paris, London, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Detroit and Honolulu, Kans.

KANSAS GROUP
The contingent from Holcomb and neighboring Garden City were friends made by Capote during the five years spent in Kansas researching his best seller, Cold Blood, which is expected to bring Capote $2,000,000, including film rights.

The bachelor novelist decided to spend some of his new fortune on a fun party for a few hundred of his closest friends such as Lynda Bird Johnson, Henry Ford II, Alcee Roosevelt, Longworth, Cecil Beaton, Mrs.

Capote

Lynda Bird

Joseph P. Kennedy, Henry Fonda, the Mahanoses of Baroda, Nicholas de B. Katzenbach, Frank and Mia Sinatra, Edward Albee, and Baronesse Guy de Rothschild. He selected Mrs. Katharine Graham, president of Newsweek, and The Washington Post, as guest of honor.

COSTLY GOWNS
Guests were asked to dress in black and white to complement the red decor of the Plaza's gilded ballroom, which was set with red-clothed tables, lit by gold candlesticks with white tapers and decorated with red and white flowers. Men wore ordinary dinner clothes but the ladies have kept top designers busy for weeks whipping together expensive gowns, culottes and even see-through creations. Some women have spent as much as $500 on bejeweled and bejeweled masks, head-dresses and furs, while others have had exotic masks painted directly on their faces by makeup wizards.

The evening's schedule included a personal greeting by Capote and Mr. Graham for each guest, dancing to the music of Peter Dinklage's orchestra and the Soul Brothers, a Negro rock 'n' roll group from Detroit, and a 2 a.m. champagne supper.

Many guests attended private dinner parties given at the apartments and town houses of Mrs. Gardner Cowles of the publishing family, theatrical producer Leland Hayward, Mrs. Henry J. Heinz II of the food processing fortune, and fashion leader Mrs. Carter Burden, wife of a Vanderbilt heir. Capote entertained Mrs. Graham in his Plaza suite before donning his $5-cent black Halloween mask for the ball.

Not all of those invited came. Mrs. John F. Kennedy remained in Newport and President and Mrs. Johnson sent regrets, as did the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and Sen. and Mrs. Edward Kennedy.

New Start Planned Across Sea

HALIFAX (CP) — The Panamanian tug Centra has arrived back here with two cable ships she attempted to tow across the Atlantic.

The tug originally left Nov. 17 for La Spezia, Italy, with former Western Union ships Lord Kelvin and Cyren Field in tow.

Tow lines to both ships parted in heavy seas about 300 miles southeast of here three days later and it was not until last Wednesday that the Centra was able to reattach lines to the drifting vessels.

Summit Can't Wait

BUDAPEST (UPI) — Hungarian leader Janos Kadar called Monday for an urgent international Communist summit meeting to restore unity in the common interest of helping North Viet Nam.

Kadar specifically invited China and its ally Albania while denouncing Peking for "disrupting the unity of the revolutionary forces."

TWO INTERESTS

"We cannot wait until the end of time for this comprehensive conference," Kadar said. "The interests of the international working class movement and of mankind come before all."

Kadar's call came during a four-hour address to the opening session of the ninth Hungarian party congress.

It echoed proposal made at the Bulgarian party congress in Sofia two weeks ago and endorsed by the Soviet Union.

But only 36 of the 50 Communist parties in Sofia supported the proposal. Romania was strongly opposed, Italy voiced reservations and 12 other parties took no stand at all.

High School Training

Junior Business Idea Tried Again

By GEORGE INGLIS

Ninety-one young Victorians are involved in indoctrination training under the international Junior Achievement Program so they can take their places in a free, adult society.

The program, 10 years old in B.C., is being launched for the first time in Victoria, with high school students taking part. An effort to launch a similar program two years ago failed to get off the ground.

This new venture is being spearheaded by Eric Mallett of the B.C. Telephone Co., with Len Nielsen serving as manager of the Victoria centre.

Four Firms

In Victoria, the program is being sponsored by four commercial firms — The Bay, Eaton's, Woodward's and B.C. Telephone. The sponsors supply no money, donating simply the talents of some of their junior executives.

Everything the Achievers, as the members of the youth group are called, do is self-financed, self-administered and self-controlled. The adults supply the advice to get them started and are available for consultation and advice throughout.

The youngsters have been split into four companies — one for each sponsor — and have selected their officers and board of directors.

No Limits

The next step is for the companies to decide within their own boards of directors what product they intend to manufacture.

There is no limitation on this, except for the limitation of capital the company directors feel is practical to raise, and the length of time it takes to become operative. The companies are limited to the length of the school term in operation. When the product has been selected, the directors, who include most of the members of the company, hold a financial pow-wow.

Must Come

The money for manufacturing the article, paying the rent and utilities and any salaries approved by the board, must come from sale of common stock. Machinery or tools are usually rented from this same fund.

Stock must be sold at $1 a share and no more than one share may be sold to any one person.

When manufacture begins, selected members of the company are on hand to scrutinize the finished product to make sure it is of good quality.

Sales Staff

At this stage, the company splits off some of the members to act as a sales staff, and the finished product is sold — no more than one to a customer to give the young people the maximum sales experience. From the moment the first meeting is staged, the young

Legal Side Door Used In Rare Appeal Bid

OTTAWA (CP) — A Winnipeg lawyer, using a side-door method, won leave from the Supreme Court of Canada Monday for an unusual appeal action.

Harry Walsh sought to appeal the decision of a Manitoba juvenile court judge who granted a Crown application to transfer a 15-year-old Indian boy to the adult court on a non-capital murder charge.

The Juvenile Delinquents Act restricts appeals from this type of transfer order.

HABEAS CORPUS
Mr. Walsh, however, based his case on a 1964 amendment to the Criminal Code that broadened the avenue for appeals to the Supreme Court in habeas corpus applications. These seek to establish whether a person has been lawfully imprisoned, prior to trial.

In agreeing to hear the habeas corpus appeal, the Supreme Court in essence will be studying the order under which the boy was placed in adult prison after his transfer from the juvenile court.

ONE OF PAIR
Should this order be set aside it would have the effect of returning the boy to juvenile court. He has not yet come to trial.

Allen Sarchuk, counsel for the Manitoba attorney-general, argued that the motion for leave to appeal should not be granted without exceptional circum-

Experts Needed In Welfare Field

OTTAWA (CP) — Management specialists in the field of personnel should be called in to help solve manpower problems in the welfare field, Nova Scotia's deputy welfare minister told senior welfare officials Monday.

F. R. MacKinnon said methods of job analysis and classification continually should be applied to determine the nature of social welfare jobs, the kinds of skills required to do them and the kinds of education and training required to prepare staff for them.

He spoke to about 150 delegates to the Conference on Manpower Needs in the Field of Social Welfare, sponsored by the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. The three-day conference opened Monday.

Mr. MacKinnon said technical education at the high school level should be stepped up. There should be no great gulf between technical and undergraduate courses and professional education in the university.

At a morning session Professor John Morgan of the University of Toronto school of social work suggested social work schools should combine sources at regional, provincial and national levels.

Staff could be pooled on a rotating basis to provide a central school for advanced studies which could turn out needed teachers and senior staff.

Four City Backers

stone on Yates, donated for the purpose.

Students have been selected from all high schools within the district and are good scholars, screened carefully from the list of applicants by a former Achiever.

Two Hours

The principals of all high schools support the program, which takes only two evening hours a week from each student. It has to receive the green light from the school boards, too.

Mr. Mallett, a charter member of the group in the province, said Canada will soon have its own headquarters for Junior Achievement in Toronto. The program started in New York in 1925, and has spread to Canada, New Zealand, England and Australia.

Other Areas

In 10 years in B.C., programs have been launched in Vancouver, New Westminster, Prince George, Surrey, Mission, Port Alberni and Nanaimo.

There are programs in Toronto, Montreal, Windsor and Winnipeg.

This history of the organization has been filled with success. Dividends paid for stock on liquidation have ranged from 20 to 40 per cent in 85 per cent of the projects.

Many business firms on both sides of the border look favorably on job applications from Achievers.

Unions, Too

Labor unions have also given approval to the program.

In the Labor Union, publication of the AFL, the movement has been cited as a means of enlightenment, "the best way to preserve a free society."

The publication also, in an article printed when Junior Achievement started in B.C., said the program is based on creating equal opportunity and "this country is built on equal opportunity for all."

Treasure Plaintiffs 'Unwilling to Dive'

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — A man who recovered an estimated $1,000,000 in treasure from a sunken ship last year, testified Monday that five men who now are suing him for breach of contract, were unwilling to dive for the treasure ship.

The suit, brought against Alex Storm who recovered gold and coins from the 18th-century French payship Le Chameau, was adjourned until today in Supreme Court.

Storm testified that four of the five men who brought suit against him appeared little interested in the treasure when he showed them charts in 1961. The plaintiffs claim an agreement signed with him in 1961 has never been terminated.

Storm told Mr. Justice Y. J. Pottier that the plaintiffs, led by Ronald Blunden of nearby Glace Bay, "were lazy and unwilling to dive for Le Chameau."

He had shown charts to four of the plaintiffs in 1961, but they indicated they believed the coins already had been recovered.

"I'm gathering from what you're saying that the plaintiffs didn't think there was anything there at all," asked Mr. Justice Pottier.

"That's right, sir," Storm replied.

Tel Aviv Beauty Strictly Orthodox

By LEO HEIMAN
TEL AVIV — Each Friday at dusk, candlelights flicker from the fifth-floor window of a new co-op apartment house on Arlosoroff Street.

The blonde beauty who lights the Sabbath candles and folds her hands in a gesture of great piety while saying the traditional thanksgiving prayer, does not fit into the bustling background of Israel's modern go-go society.

Few housewives in Tel Aviv's exclusive residential districts maintain such traditions as lighting Sabbath candles, praying before the traditional meal of gefilte fish, horseradish, chicken soup and dumplings, or even bother to keep a kosher kitchen, in accordance with Jewish ritual and dietary laws.

The blonde symbol of religious piety would more properly belong to the ultra-Orthodox quarters of Jewish Jerusalem. No lipstick or makeup mars the natural beauty of her face and there is no plunging neckline. She is deeply shocked when anyone mentions pork chops, drinking milk after eating meat, or driving on Saturday.

Mrs. Raphael Shauli, 21, observed a 26-hour fast on Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement, last September, built a tabernacle on the roof of her house to commemorate the 40 years that Moses and the Children of Israel spent wandering in the wilderness, and checks whether the great she buys from a corner store bears the "Strictly Kosher" seal of the Tel Aviv Rabbinate.

Three years ago, Mrs. Shauli was known as Mandy Rice-Davies, the heroine (if that is the word) of the Profumo affair, a scandal of sex-and-espionage in Britain that reverberated throughout the world, toppled the Conservative government, led to five arrests, three commissions of inquiry, two suicides and one resignation of a senior cabinet minister from his post at the Ministry of War.

Into Nightclubs

Together with her friend Christine Keeler, Mandy was charged with being a member of a call-girl vice ring that serviced both the upper levels of Britain's establishment and lower depths of international espionage, setting up the high and the mighty as the fall guys for wily Soviet diplomats.

After the ring was broken, the spies had scurried for cover, the mastermind Dr. Stephen Ward had taken his own life, and Christine went to jail for perjury. Mandy parlayed her notoriety into show business gimmicks, signing contracts to appear in West German, Dutch and French nightclubs.

She was billed as the Erotic Oracle, giving earthy advice to lovers, mistresses and newly married couples.

Third Marriage

She was married twice (to a French baron and a German count, whom she calls "robber baron") and "no account count" respectively, before coming to Israel last year to give her spiel in Tel Aviv nightclubs.

It was here that she met Raphael (Rafi) Shauli, 26, a former Israeli army paratrooper and border commando fighter. It was love at first sight, and despite her background Mandy still believes in such things.

Mrs. Raphael Shauli

After Mandy's divorce from the "no-account count," she wired curly-haired Rafi from London: "Come and get me."

Discotheque

He went, got her, married her in the British capital and took her back to the Holy Land as his lawfully wedded wife. He parlayed his separation pay from the army and his spouse's knowledge of the world (and world's knowledge of her) into Whisky A Go-Go, Tel Aviv's most popular discotheque, which is jam-packed by crowds eager to see Mandy perform.

"My parents were Christian and I grew up in the Protestant faith, but since the age of 16 my religion was money," Mandy said. "I found God only now."

Mandy's love affair with the Jewish religion amazes the officials of Tel Aviv Rabbinate.

Feelings Genuine

"She's probably more religious than most Israeli women, observes more ritual and dietary laws than most Tel Aviv housewives, but we can't make her conversion final before the minimum waiting period of six months," says Rabbi Eliahu Elkayam.

"Her religious feelings are genuine," adds Rabbi Moshe Donner. "In nine out of ten cases, gentle girls embrace Judaism to marry Jewish men. But Mrs. Shauli is already married. She does not need us, or our approval. She just wants her children to grow up in an Orthodox Jewish home."

Three-Category Concert Fine, Balanced Variety

By BERT BENNY
The Sunday afternoon Victoria Symphony Orchestra concert was decidedly well attended and provided an enjoyable, balanced and nicely varied program.

There were three items from three musical categories.

When this reporter was in his youth, some compositions were taboo because he was deemed too young to appreciate them. Under this heading would come Beethoven's fourth symphony, which occupied the second half of Sunday's program.

MODERN EXAMPLE

But, in the first half we had Shostakovich's concerto for piano, trumpet and string orchestra. In contradistinction from the Beethoven, this could well be an example of music he now is too old to appreciate to the full.

However, these two personal misgivings were more than compensated by the third item, Schubert's Unfinished symphony, which is a melodious joy for young, old and in-between alike.

SONG OF LOVE

It is noteworthy that the Unfinished has, during its lifetime, probably been played more often than any piece of "popular" music; there is a beautiful arrangement of it for violin and piano, and the second theme provided the basis for Song of Love in Romy's Blossom Time.

In other words, it has something for everybody.

Beethoven's fourth symphony, as the program notes cunningly divulge, lies between the third and the fifth — this to emphasize its differences from the "heroic" third and the "mystic" fifth.

Schumann called the fourth "a slender Greek Maiden between two Norse giants." But for all this, it retains much of the sweeping Beethoven grandeur, and the Sunday performance was certainly much appreciated by the whole audience.

Shostakovich's piano concerto utilizes the trumpet and a string orchestra. But the piano clearly is the favored instrument and Robin Wood provided a most sensitive and consistently excellent performance.

Trumpeter David Fisher was likewise excellent; one wished to hear more from him, but Shostakovich decreed otherwise.

While with its performance of the Schubert symphony, the orchestra made everything additionally worthwhile with its performance of the Schubert symphony.

SOUND DEFINITION

The music is referred to as "a perfect work of art" and, if the art concerned is that of giving uninterrupted pleasure, the definition is sound indeed.

The fifth pair of concerts, Dec. 11 and 12, will offer Beethoven's Pastoral and Tchaikovsky's Pathétique symphonies.

Traffic Toll Showing 1966 Boost

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's tolls of traffic deaths, injuries and property damage have shown alarming increases for the first six months of 1966 compared to last year, the Canadian Highway Safety Council reports.

The council said 2,022 persons had been killed in traffic accidents from Jan. 1 to June 30, and 69,491 injured.

Pravda Attacks Peking Course

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Communist party paper Pravda called upon opponents of Mao Tse-tung inside China to halt his "erroneous course."

The most sweeping attack on Peking made here in recent years charged that Mao's policies have brought "failures in domestic and foreign policy" that caused growing dissatisfaction in China.

Negroes Gather Power For Assault on Slums

NEW YORK (AP)—In a half dozen cities of the northern United States, young Negroes are taking tentative steps toward harnessing power, for an assault on slum conditions.

The anti-white, anti-slum groups are taking tentative steps toward harnessing power, for an assault on slum conditions. The anti-white, anti-slum groups are taking tentative steps toward harnessing power, for an assault on slum conditions.

Philadelphians, Newark, Baltimore, Detroit and Chicago. The issue, say leaders of the new groups, is not so much integration but whether a man should have a say in the things which touch his life every day: housing conditions, his own education and that of his children, welfare policies if he is on relief, employment with companies from which he buys food, politics.

Writers are usually welcome if they accept the goals Negroes have set but they are not considered necessary. When three students led a four-day walkout of 2,300 students from Detroit's Negro Northern high school in April, the issue was not integration but quality education.

TRY NEW APPROACH Their list of complaints included poor and inadequate equipment, plus a group of teachers who, they said, had no interest in teaching them. "I didn't feel the school was preparing me properly," said one student leader. "You need a good education but it doesn't have to be integrated."

No one is predicting how effective these groups will be. They are still new and small, and rather than do things for Negroes from above as many organizations did in the past, they are trying to involve large numbers of people in fighting for their own causes.

WILLING TO WORK In many instances, however, old-line civil rights organizations are willing to work side-by-side with the new groups. Success of the new groups has been spotty, partly because many are less than a year old. All have one technique in common. They aim at immediate objectives, trying to give slum dwellers a voice in social agreements, welfare policies and other things they live with every day.

Results have sometimes been gratifying to the organizers. The student-led walkout in Detroit brought promises that the principal would be replaced.

Who Will Franco Name?

Spanish Reign Complicated By Fixed Rules

MADRID (AP)—Spain's Gen. Franco has raised two intriguing questions: When will he name his successor under the new organic law and whom will he pick as the new premier or head of government?

There was speculation on these two points even before Franco presented to a special session of the Spanish Cortes (parliament) last Tuesday his new organic laws giving Spaniards greater representation in government. Since then the speculation has increased tenfold.

FRANCO NOW RULES as both chief of state and head of government. The field of possible candidates to head a constitutional monarchy in Spain under Franco's amended laws is sharply limited by the requirements that the man must be a Roman Catholic, a Spaniard of royal blood at least 30 years of age and acceptable to the council of the realm, the cabinet and the Franco-controlled Cortes.

THREE PROBABLES There appear at the moment to be only three probable candidates. Of these, Don Juan de Bourbon, the exiled Spanish pretender and the third son of Spain's last monarch Alfonso XIII, appears eliminated because of Franco's opposition to his returning as king.

The pretender's son, Prince Juan Carlos de Bourbon, the apparent choice of Franco to head the restored monarchy, is only 28. He would have to rule for at least two years through a regent if the choice should fall on him immediately. Married to Princess Sophie of Greece, Prince Juan Carlos enjoys little personal popularity among average Spaniards and not much more among officials of the regime, who would have to ratify his selection.

BANK WORKER A third prospect is Prince Alfonso Jaime de Bourbon-Dampierre, a six-foot-four son of Prince Jaime, de-mutated second son of Alfonso XIII, bachelor of 30. Prince Alfonso works in a Madrid bank, loves such sports as flying, swimming and driving and appears to enjoy as much, if not more, popularity as any of the other descendants of the exiled royal family now living in Spain.

A fourth and active candidate is the Carlist, Prince Carlos Hugo de Bourbon-Parma, married to Dutch Princess Irene. Most officials insist he is of French nationality and thus disqualified.

Tourism Target Set Beyond $1,000,000,000

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's income from tourists should be around $1,000,000,000 next year and hopes are that within 10 years that figure will be doubled.

Dan Wallace, director of the Canadian government travel bureau, said in an interview Monday as federal provincial talks on tourism got under way behind closed doors that the increase in tourist business expected during centennial year.

"We don't want to stop at $1,000,000,000 in tourist business," Mr. Wallace said. "Over the next 10 years we want to double our business."

THREE DAYS Provincial, federal and territorial representatives are attending three days of talks at which tourism and travel in Canada will be reviewed and guidelines possibly set for ensuring the continued health of that industry.

All provinces are represented at the meetings except Newfoundland which was unable to send a delegation because its legislature opens Wednesday.

Several provincial cabinet ministers were unable to join the sessions because of travel difficulties or other commitments. But ministers from Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia and Ontario were at Monday's meeting at which Trade Minister Winters represented the federal government.

REPORTS TODAY Mr. Winters said in an interview he hoped the meetings, which are closed except for a few invited guests, would be successful.

Only Births Show Decrease

OTTAWA (CP)—Every province has had more marriages and deaths but fewer births this year than last.

Quebec shows some of the most extreme figures in all three categories through the first 10 months of 1966, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Monday.

Quebec's total births were down 7.4 per cent to the end of October at 95,313. For Canada as a whole, there were 7.4 per cent fewer births to the end of October, 6.7 per cent more marriages and 2.3 per cent more deaths.

The number of marriages in Quebec has increased eight per cent this year to 34,337 and its deaths up 4.5 per cent at 31,396.

Totals of births for the first 10 months of 1966 (percentage decreases from 1965 in parentheses):

Canada 330,285 (7.4 per cent); Newfoundland 12,496 (1.3); Prince Edward Island 1,846 (12.8); Nova Scotia 12,942 (8.2); New Brunswick 38,815 (11.4); Quebec 95,313 (7.4); Ontario 111,875 (7.8); Manitoba 15,651 (8.3); Alberta 25,575 (6.6); British Columbia 27,618 (2.4).

Intimidation Denied By Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—Senior government officials are not discouraging employees from talking an active role in proposed collective bargaining, Revenue Minister Benson told the Commons Monday.

David Lewis (NDP—York South) asked the minister to comment on a statement by the 9,000-member Professional Intimidation of the Public Service which said that the government was using intimidation to force members of the treasury board under Mr. Benson.

The statement said officials, among other things, were withholding employees about which they would fall into the minimum category when bargaining begins, likely next year.

Mr. Benson said his inquiries indicated "there was no such intimidation going on."

Fluoride 'Fog' Forecast

As Oak Bay's anti-fluoridationists will soon be dropping a "horrible bomb of hocus-pocus."

The look into the future came Monday night from Dr. Harold Carter, who led the campaign for the fluoridation referendum that will go to Oak Bay ratepayers Dec. 10. He said the bomb, which will probably come about two days before the vote, will be designed to frighten a voter who is undecided on the issue.

When the question of fluoridating municipal water supplies was presented to Oak Bay voters last year, it fell 4 per cent short of the required 60 per cent majority. The chief spokesman for the anti-fluoridationists that time was Mrs. Lydia Arsens, former Social Credit MLA, who operates a health food store. She said Monday night she is too busy with the store this year, and the spokesman will be Lt.-Col. H. S. Thullier. He couldn't be reached for comment on Dr. Carter's observations.

Dr. Carter said people who claim there's a difference between natural and "artificial" fluorides in a water system are wrong. An ion of fluorine is an ion of fluorine anywhere, he said.

"The anti-fluoridationists make these claims without any knowledge of chemistry or physics," said Dr. Carter. He added the "vaunted scientists" whose names are used to document anti-fluorine arguments are generally proved to be non-existent.

Slav Must Go Ottawa Says

A young Yugoslav who escaped his Iron Curtain ties by jumping ship in Quebec four months ago and came here has been told by the immigration department he is to be deported.

The action is being taken against Vinko Kucina, 120 Dallas Road, apparently in spite of the fact he has relatives here to employ him and be his sponsors.

The government said Mr. Kucina was in the country illegally and the letter in which it said his appeal to remain in the country has been denied gave no explanation. He has asked Victoria Liberal MP David Gross for help.

Schools should do more than just produce people with wage-earning skills, Victoria psychiatrist Charles Gregory said Monday.

Appealing for drastic revisions in the education system, he told the Cedar Hill-Brasfoot PTA that "we've been far too concerned with ramming facts into kids' heads."

He said he doesn't dispute the need for scientists and technicians—"The thing I'm afraid of is that is where we stop."

He said schools should be producing young adults who "think for themselves, who make their own decisions and feel secure about them, who are committed to others, who are concerned with the community."

Fund Lacks 3.2 Cents On Dollar

The United Appeal, at the close of business Monday, was still short 3.2 cents on each dollar required for its $452,000 quota. The amount stood at $37,797 or 84.5 per cent of its objective.

Officials decided at a meeting Monday night to continue an intensive mapping-up campaign during this week, the fifth extra week of canvassing. A statement will be made Friday on results.

One heartening letter came from city alderman candidate H. Lloyd Clarkson who said he had saved $58 for his campaign fund. "As your campaign is more important to the community, I am turning the money over to you," he wrote.

Workshops, Not Prisons

BOTHWELL, Ont. (CP)—Solicitor General Larry Pennell said Monday night he wants to see the federal government's five new minimum security prisons in Canada regarded as workshops for disoriented young people rather than places of confinement for offenders.

Old Salt Dies At 98

A veteran sailor who survived three wars died Sunday in Veterans' Hospital.

Captain John Joseph Moore, of 1738 Leighton Road, was 98. Early followers of Victoria's waterfront will remember him as captain of the Canadian Hydrographic Services Ship CGS Lillooet.

Later he took command of the William J. Stewart, which is still in service with hydrographic survey. It was brand new then.

He retired from the sea in 1945 and carried on with shore jobs until 1957 when he retired permanently.

Interviewed at his 97th birthday party last year the captain said if he had it all to do over again he wouldn't change a thing and would certainly follow the sea.

He was born on the Island of Man and ran away to go to sea at the age of 13. He was probably one of the few people who could say he was in the navy during three wars.

In the Boer War he was in the naval reserve, in the First World War he served out of Halifax and in the Second World War was active here in the navy.

He was a member of the Royal Canadian Legion Trafalgar Branch and the Merchant Service Guild.

He is survived by two sons, Capt. J. E. Moore of Victoria and W. Frank Moore of Nanaimo; daughters Mrs. F. O. (Margaret) Rockwell, Mrs. Cecil A. (Vera) Holt, and Mrs. Stuart (Ethel) Brookman, all of Victoria, five grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Funeral services will be held at Sands chapel at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Chatterton Tells Tories:

'Forget Disgrace—Build for Future'

By GEORGE INGLIS

Conservative MP George Chatterton of Esquimalt-Saanich Monday told members of his constituency association to forget the "disgrace and blot on the Conservative party," and build for the future.

Mr. Chatterton said the recent pillorying of party leader John Diefenbaker at the national leadership convention in Ottawa should serve to shake party members from their complacency and impress them with the urgency of building for the future.

Mr. Chatterton was extolled by Russ Simpson, re-elected president of the association, for his strength and steadfastness in the face of the "brutal shellacking" of the party leader.

Mr. Simpson, a delegate to the Ottawa convention, called it "an example of machine politics that would shatter you," but said it may have done a service to the party, since it showed the country how the ridings stood firm on party policy, and left the insurrection to the delegates-at-large.

Mr. Simpson's mention of "a man in a hurry" (David Fulton, PC Kamloops) drew boos from the audience.

He said, "Monday night after I punched one cuckoo in the nose, I wanted to resign from the party."

His spirits rallied, he said, when he saw the would-be engineered landslide succeed in electing Dalton Camp by a mere 62 votes, mostly from delegates-at-large.

Mrs. Vera Ashford, association secretary and a delegate to the convention, reported on the women's meeting, and the slimy amount of business conducted at the general meeting.

The association returned Mr. Simpson as president, Mrs. Radford as secretary, Aubrey Westinghouse as vice-president and Arthur Round as treasurer.

Witty Wins Backing Against Mini-Metro

By NANCY BROWN

Declaring "this is my home, and it has been my family's home for 101 years," Leslie Witty asked for and received the support of most of the members of the Metchoshin ratepayers association in his bid to stop expropriation proceedings of 44 acres of his land for a park by mini-metro.

At the same time Mr. Witty refused to consider putting into writing his verbal undertaking to give the board an option on the property if it should ever be for sale.

"I think expropriation is undemocratic. I thought the wars we fought were to prevent things like this," said Mr. Witty.

REFUSED $100,000 — The regional board has offered Les Witty and his brother Stanley $100,000 for the land, to be used as a park, and they have refused.

Protesting the expropriation, Mr. William Whitney Griffiths said "If this goes through, we will never know who would be next. If anyone has a good piece of property, a bunch of people can always come along and grab it."

Metchoshin mini-metro representative Geoffrey Mitchell said Witty's Lagoon was a priority item on the board's list of parkland. "The Wittys have said that they wish to develop this as a trailer park. Economically speaking there are many expenses they would have to meet."

Mr. Witty said he and his brother wished to retire to the area. "If we are allowed to keep this property I hope to come back here to live, possibly within a year. We would like to develop it ourselves, with a trailer park, and other facilities."

Mrs. Dorothy Whitney Griffiths said she owned 20 acres above the lagoon, which she would be willing to sell to the government.

NO FIRST REFUSAL — A motion to ask the regional board to stop expropriation proceedings was carried by a clear majority.

Another motion to write to Mr. Witty, and ask him to give a legal undertaking to allow the board first refusal of the property, if and when either he or his heirs were willing to sell, was carried by a two-vote majority.

Said Mr. Witty, "I couldn't do that. Whichever would my heirs think of me? That land is not for sale. If ever it is I will give the government a chance to buy it."

Winter Protection

By M. V. CHESNUT

While most of the plants we grow hereabouts are perfectly hardy and come through a normal winter without any kind of protection, there are a few kinds which might be termed borderline cases — plants of doubtful hardiness, surviving mild winters but perishing if exposed to more severe weather without some kind of covering.

A good example of a borderline plant is the true Lemon Verbena. I may true because there are several other plants masquerading incorrectly under this name. The plant I mean is Lippia citrifolia, a South American shrub that gives off a most refreshing scent of lemons when the leaves are touched. I am told there are specimens wintering successfully on Salt Spring Island and I imagine there are others tucked away in sheltered positions, but for most locations Lippia should be wintered in a coldframe or unheated greenhouse or draped with sackcloth for the winter.

The older kinds of montbretia are quite winter-hardy and need no protection, but some of the newer hybrids are not standing up too well here and are best lifted and replanted in a coldframe.

Or, if no frame is available, cut down the spent topgrowth and mound sawdust over the roots. Good drainage is a must for these plants.

The Red Hot Pokers (kniphofia) and the Foxglove lilies (eremurus) can be grown successfully in much colder parts of Canada than here, but these plants don't care much for our wet winters and should be looked upon as borderline cases. In sunny, sheltered, well-drained spots they come through without any particular fussing, but in heavy soil, in sites where puddles tend to lie in winter and in low-lying frost pockets it is best, to winter them in a frame or rig up a small plastic shelter of some kind to keep off the wet. The kniphofias should have their leaves bundled and tied to keep the winter rain out of their tender hearts.

Hydrangeas will survive anywhere here, but getting them to bloom is a pup from a different litter. The buds for next year's flowers have already formed and a severe frost can nip these, ruining any chance of bloom until 1968. Plants which have been damaged this way in previous winters are best dug up and transplanted to a sheltered position against a south-facing wall.

If no such site is available, your best bet for protecting the sensitive terminal buds is to bundle the main shoots together, tying them with something soft — don't use scratchy twine as the bark is very tender — and erect over them some kind of covering made of sackcloth or plastic.

One local gardener of my acquaintance who lives in a notorious frost pocket never had a single bloom on his hydrangeas until he started covering the shrub every winter with a plastic garment bag. Nowadays he protects the terminal buds by spraying them with Wilt-Pruf, an excellent liquid plastic preparation.

If you transplant your hydrangeas to the sunny side of a house wall, you'll have some further worries next summer. The hydrangeas is a hardy for water and is just about the first plant in the garden to drop its leaves in time of drought. Because a position against a south wall is notoriously dry in summer, it will be necessary to water deeply and frequently, and maintain a surface mulch of sawdust or lawn mowings over the roots when next summer's dry spell arrives.

ART BUCHWALD Meets Eichmann's Best Friend

Loyal Nazi Takes Off Mask

There was a spate of so-called neo-Nazi activity in last week's Bavarian elections. In Germany and naturally everyone who lives through the Second World War is slightly nervous.

What the emergence of a new right wing in Germany means is hard to say, but it's quite possible that after denying for 20 years that they were Nazis, many former members of the party might feel it politically wise to insist they were.

"Herr Schmidt, you're very kind to see me in your Bavarian Schloss. There are rumors that you were a member of the Nazi party."

"Vat do you mean rumors? I was a loyal Nazi till the very end."

"But in your testimony at the Nuremberg trials you denied it."

"Lies, all lies. Ask anyone. Ven you thought of Schmidt, you thought of Nazis, and ven you thought of Nazis, you thought of Schmidt."

"But surely, sir, you were a minor functionary, a victim of circumstances."

"Are you trying to ruin my political career? I was gaulster in charge of an entire district. Would you like to see my blank boots?"

"But even so, you said at your trial that you didn't know Eichmann."

"Vat do you mean I didn't know Eichmann? I was his best friend. We worked side by side in the same office. We shared the same locker."

"But isn't it true that you only followed orders?"

"Vat kind of question is that? I gave the orders. Vas I some sort of robot who just did what people told me to do?"

"I guess what has confused me was your testimony at Nuremberg."

"I was in a daze at Nuremberg. I couldn't remember anything. But it's all come back now. If you don't believe me, read the record."

"You said you had become disillusioned with Adolf Hitler in 1933 and you only stayed in the party because you were afraid of being put into prison."

"That's ridiculous. I loved Hitler like a brother. He gave me the Iron Cross and I still have an autographed photo taken with him and Eva Braun. Here it is in my campaign literature."

"Then you were not in on the plot to kill Hitler in 1944?"

"I was the one who discovered the plot and saved his life."

"You also said at Nuremberg that you never knew there were any concentration camps in Germany."

"How could I say such a thing ven I built them? I was the father of the concentration camps."

"You certainly seem to be a different man than you were in 1946."

"I was caught up in the emotions of the time. I hope people will judge me now, not by what I said in 1946, but by what I did in 1939."

"Well, thank you, sir."

"It was my pleasure, and by the way, Hell Hitler."

Ringo Offered Movie Role

HOLLYWOOD (NANAY) — Beatle Ringo Starr has been offered a movie role by the American manager of the Beatles. The gentleman, Allen Klein, is also after one or more of the other Beatles. Ringo, in my opinion, seemed the most at home in the movie medium, whereas Paul McCartney, who is the best on stage, was the most uncomfortable on celluloid. The Rolling Stones, incidentally, still have to make their movie debut and that might be fairly soon.

In spite of the bad reviews for the Macbeth of Simone Signoret and Sir Alec Guinness, it will be a film with two stars. Now the whole world will have a chance to agree or disagree with the London critics. . . . The doctors have already given Charlie Chaplin his Christmas present — he can remove the cast on his broken ankle this week.

The Hollywood premiere of The Sand Pebbles promises to be a spectacular affair — the $100 ticket includes the Renaissance Ball afterwards at the Beverly Hilton. They say that Steve McQueen's performance in the film is of academy award calibre. And now we are beginning to get an idea of which pictures and performers stand a chance of an Oscar nomination — the Burtons for Virginia Woolf, Paul Scofield, I hear, is remarkably good in A Man for All Seasons, Earl Lancaster has a chance with The Professionals — the Bedgrave sisters — Lynn for George C. Scott, Vanessa for Morgan, Alvin for The Russians Are Coming, with Michael Caine the dark horse for Alito.

They say that all the action at Christmas and New Year will be at Palm Springs, with Frankie and Mia holding semi-open houses — i.e., you can't get past the door without an invitation. . . . And with all the action on the Strip, the Eftem Zimbalist TV series, 77 Sunset Strip, is suddenly very much in demand again. . . . Jean-Paul Belmondo is old-fashioned. After he was complimented for a love scene in The Thief, he said, "Yes, I prefer this kind of romance to those on the screen today where everyone curls up like a corker in a corner."

Ross Hunter has Peter O'Toole set to play the detective in The Public Eye. For the spring, in Britain.

Shirley MacLaine was reminiscing on the set of Woman Times Seven. In 1954 you couldn't give me away. I had made The Trouble with Harry, and then I put on a yellow sunsuit and jumped around with Jerry Lewis in Artists and Models. I was so discouraged that I went to a five-and-ten at Malibu and asked for a job. The woman asked me if I had experience. "I eat sing and dance," I told her. Shirley did not land the job — fortunately. She was ready to give up when Burt Reynolds offered her Some Came Running. But even then my career was shaky. I was gloriously miscast as a Scotch-Irish-Hind in Around the World in 80 Days. It didn't matter. The movie was a hit.

If you are wondering about Emilio Fernandez, who plays the heel in Return of the Seven, Emilio says he once used Fred Astaire as an extra in Mexican films. Want? Emilio the man who was rumored engaged to Ava Gardner during Night of the Iguana? . . . Hugh O'Brien, who makes the best dressed man list, will be the best-dressed Westerner in Cowboy in Africa. Hugh's outfits were custom-made for him by Brooks Brothers in New York.

What's money, says Elvis Presley? He bought the $25,000 racing car he drives in Spinout, drove it for a week, then gave it away.

You have to be lucky. Young producers Alcoa and Sam Thomas have Ronald Reagan in his last appearance as an actor — in the television documentary, Freedom's First Fight. Stations all over the country are begging to buy the show — the American revolution told through paintings — because everyone and his wife want to see the good-looking actor before he becomes a good-looking governor. The handsomest of all U.S. politicians is Mayor Lindsay of New York, and if he continues to make those non-stop appearances on television, he might reverse the process and end up as an actor.

Rape Case Going To Spring Assizes

The case of a Victoria man charged with the rape of a 20-year-old Colwood girl will be heard at the Spring Assizes, Magistrate William Oulter decided in Central Magistrate's court Monday.

Vernon Humphrey, 620 Huxley, was committed for trial in a higher court by the magistrate after a preliminary hearing conducted last Thursday.

The Crown contended that Humphrey intimidated the girl into engaging in intercourse with him in a car parked on Admirals Road near the Indian cemetery on Sept. 15.

Defence counsel Dermot Owen-Flood argued there was no evidence to support the claim that the girl's consent was gained through intimidation by fear of bodily harm.

Oliver Cottam, 1007 McCaskill, was fined $100, and sentenced to one day in jail after being found guilty by Magistrate Oulter on a charge of assault causing bodily harm during an Oct. 23 fracas in a Blanshard Street home.

Shuart Morgan, 2324 Blanshard, said Cottam had struck him twice in the face. Cottam said he didn't hit anyone during an altercation which took place when Mrs. Morgan tried to evict her son, Cottam, and another man from the house.

"How old are you now?" asked the magistrate, and Cottam replied that he was 21. "Are you ever going to start acting like this?" asked Magistrate Oulter.

Fined in traffic court Monday for driving while their licenses were under suspension were: D'Arcy J. DeLoecheer, 1147 Hilda, $100; Marie Underwood of 641 Dunedin, $100 plus an additional $15 for speeding.

Careless driving fines were imposed on: John Pearson, 1290 Richardson, $35; Michael Walsh, Work Point Barracks, $40; Peter Shipen, 3632 Crestview Road, $40.

Rumbling Resumes Wednesday

Shutter-shuddering rumbles heard here Thursday will be heard again Wednesday as the 1st Battalion of the Queen's Own Rifles will once more be putting its 106-mm. anti-tank guns to the test at Albert Head.

The battalion is hoping that atmospherics will be better for the next shoot, and that sound will not carry as far or as sharply as in the Thursday practice. Low-lying clouds during that practice boomed the sound back down to earth miles from its source.

Thursday's atmosphere was ideal for bounce sound.

Broom, Coveralls Hold Attention In Lemay Hearing

MONTREAL (CP)—A broom and a pair of coveralls said to have been used in the 1961 looting of a Montreal bank figured prominently in testimony Monday at a preliminary hearing for Georges Lemay.

Lemay is charged with having conspired to commit the burglary.

Fifteen minutes were spent in describing and reiterating the description of the coveralls.

Crown witness Jacques Lajoie said were worn by Lemay.

Previous testimony by branch officials was that 377 safety deposit boxes in the branch vault were looted of $53,895.

Lajoie testified entry to the branch was gained by keys supplied by Lemay. Entry to the vault was gained by dynamiting a hole in the cement floor of the vault, after a tunnel was dug underneath it.

Lajoie has testified in previous cases arising from the looting which have seen several persons convicted and sent to penitentiary. Lajoie himself was sentenced to one day in jail after pleading guilty. He already had served about two years, awaiting disposal of his case.

Intense cross-examination is expected to continue for some time.

Lemay, recently returned to Montreal from Las Vegas where he was recaptured with his wife in a gambling casino, was the object of a nationwide search in the United States.

He escaped custody in Florida, while fighting extradition to Canada.

Parked Cars Looted In Weekend

Thieves were active over the weekend, looting parked cars in motel parking lots.

Two .303-calibre rifles belonging to two mainland residents were taken late Saturday night from their car parked in the Colony Motor Hotel lot.

An electric razor, a bottle of rye and two dozen beer were taken from another car on the motel's parking area.

Lawrence Knox, 1917 Wilmut Place, reported a $59 sleeping bag and a pint of antifreeze were taken from his car Saturday night while parked in the Red Lion parking lot.

Several other cars were also reported broken into while parked outside the motel.

Flood Bares Arms Cache

MODENA, Italy (AP)—Receding floodwaters near the north Italian provincial capital have uncovered a large arms cache. Police said they found on a river bank mortars, dynamite, detonators, anti-truck mines, mortar fuses, hand grenades, launching cartridges for mortars and 30,000 rifle cartridges.

Lockout, Lawsuit New Dock Woes

B.C. longshoremen have been locked out until they promise to end their slowdown, the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association announced Monday.

The association also said it would sue the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's union for damages resulting from the current waterfront dispute.

In a press conference Monday in Vancouver, association president E. M. Strang said the suit had been made necessary as the result of slowdown tactics practised by longshoremen who "are being used as pawns in this power play of the union itself."

He said no longshoremen would be called to work today unless the union gave its assurance they would work normally.

The association issued this statement: "Last Wednesday we sent a telegram to Roy Smith, president of the Canadian area (ILWU), protesting the slowdown tactics by members of the ILWU.

"Since then, and for the past several days, we have ordered men for work and repeatedly warned them to cease slowdown tactics and perform in a normal fashion, otherwise they would be discharged. In almost all cases they have ignored the warning, acting on the instructions of the union, and have been discharged.

"We regret we have no alternative but to have our legal counsel proceed against the union with respect to suits for damages, which have now run into substantial sums.

"We have no doubt many of the men are ashamed of having to act in such a manner, but unfortunately they are being used as pawns in this power play of the union itself. It is economically not feasible to continue to employ men who do not perform. Consequently, they will not be employed until we are assured of normal performance."

The employers' association also discussed its discussions

Cariboo

BONNER--BARELY

WILLIAMS LAKE (Special) — Attorney-General Bonner, 46, the only Social Credit cabinet minister defeated in the Sept. 12 provincial election, scored a narrow victory Monday over a New Democrat and three other candidates.

Mr. Bonner, loser to the Liberals in Vancouver Point Grey in September, got another chance when William Speare resigned after an easy Cariboo victory.

The close byelection result leaves legislature standings at Social Credit 33, the NDP 16 and Liberals six.

The turnout was better than 70 per cent, believed to be a record, despite chill temperatures, icy winds and snow.

SMALLER MARGIN

Rev. Hartley Dent, the New Democratic candidate, placed second and improved on his September performance when he lost by 1,300 votes to Mr. Speare.

Liberal Lee Skipp was a distant third. Independent Reginald Mullins and Gerald Goejon, a Vancouver lawyer and member of the Free Trade party, attracted little attention.

There were 12,547 eligible voters in the big rural constituency.

SINCE ELECTION

Cariboo has been a strong Social Credit seat since the party's 1952 election.

The victory was Mr. Bonner's second in a country area. He was first elected in Columbia in 1952 when a Social Credit member resigned to make room for the young lawyer who had been drafted into Premier Bennett's first cabinet. Mr. Bonner subsequently ran in the Vancouver area.

The attorney-general received 1,628 votes against 1,300 for Mr. Dent in Quesnel, the largest poll. The spread was a little narrower than in September.

LOST BIG ONE

The 57-year-old Dent, an Anglican minister, took his home poll of 100-Mile House by 781 to 225 but lost Williams Lake, another large poll, 647 to 873.

At exactly 9:40, Mr. Dent stepped across the street to concede defeat.

As he shook the hand of the attorney-general, Mr. Dent said: "I hope the real winner out of this will be Cariboo and the province of British Columbia."

BAD WEATHER

In the midst of his cheering supporters, Mr. Bonner replied: "Whatever we do let's never fight an election in this kind of weather again."

Mr. Bonner commented moments before the NDP conceded:

"I personally expected to drop quite a few votes from the last majority. The way I view it I came from behind in the last three weeks. This is the first time an NDP another campaign has been beaten. In this election the NDP Mafia have been swinging from the trees."

BY WEDNESDAY

He added: "I hope to be back on the job in Victoria by Wednesday."

Queried about his future as a minister, Mr. Dent said: "What I do now all depends on Bishop Greenwood. I am a qualified teacher and I have been asked to teach junior high school classes in English and social studies. I have not made

By JACK FREY
Legislative Reporter

Premier Bennett was so happy with early Cariboo results Monday he didn't even wait for the last returns before jubilantly announcing the narrow victory of Attorney-General Bonner.

CLOSE PREDICTION

He telephoned Mr. Bonner at Quesnel to offer his personal congratulations and beamed like a proud father when it was announced he had predicted a week ago the attorney-general would win by 430 votes.

British Cool Smith Offer, Sanctions Mission Starts

'Grand Union' Certain

BONN (Reuters) — The top bodies of West Germany's Social Democratic party voted Monday to approve their leaders' controversial decision to join a "grand" coalition with the ruling Christian Democrats.

After a heated 10-hour debate, lasting until the small hours of this morning, the party's executive, finance committee and the leaders of state organizations endorsed the decision by an overwhelming majority.

The vote was 73 to 19 with no abstentions. The party's parliamentary group was believed certain to add its approval of the proposed alliance when it meets today.

Hot Time In Old Town

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal had its warmest Nov. 29 in 70 years. The temperature reached 60.6 degrees. The 1966 record high was 55.

LONDON (AP) — Britain pressed on Monday night with plans to seek compulsory United Nations sanctions against rebellious white-ruled Rhodesia, but left the door open for a last-minute compromise.

Prime Minister Wilson ordered a high-level mission of Commonwealth and foreign office diplomats to Washington and Ottawa for talks on the Rhodesian crisis and its implications in Africa generally.

The mission, led by Sir Saville Gurner, career diplomat in charge of the Commonwealth office, flew to the United States today and later to Ottawa.

OTHER COUNTRIES

An authoritative source said "the government is conducting preliminary consultations with the Commonwealth and other countries about a reference to the United Nations regarding mandatory sanctions as contemplated in the commitments and timetable agreed with Commonwealth prime ministers."

Under extreme pressure by African and Asian statesmen, Wilson pledged last month that Britain will sponsor a call to the Security Council for compulsory sanctions if Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith fails by about Nov. 30 to call off his re-

Two Freighters Down One Crew Known Safe

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard reported two freighters sinking Monday night — one off the Atlantic and the other going down in the Baltic Sea. It said everyone on the latter had been rescued.

The Coast Guard said the 245-foot, 400-ton German freighter Schirokko radioed she had lost her deck cargo and was sinking in the Baltic.

But there was no confirmation she had gone down, the coast guard added.

The ship reported a fire, the Sanrocco, a 443-foot, 7,181-ton Panamanian vessel, radioed she was sinking about 1,800 miles southeast of New York in the Atlantic.

Rumors reported from the Hague, Netherlands, the Danish fishing vessel Anja rescued the crew of the Schirokko.

The coast guard said two cutters, one from New Bedford, Mass., and the other from Miami, Fla., were sent to aid the Sanrocco. The Sanrocco's crew size was not given.

Rustler Shootout Takes 11 Lives

ACAPULCO (UPI) — Eleven people died Monday in a shootout between police and rustlers in Mexico's "lawless territory," where the gun law of the old west still prevails.

The dead included Juan Cano Iniguez, head of the rustling gang, three of his men, five policemen and two small children hit by stray bullets in the gun duel.

Six other people were wounded and in serious condition.

Authorities said the shootout began when a police patrol surrounded the rustlers in the village of Tunas, about 20 miles from Acapulco, and the bandits refused to surrender.

The gun battle lasted more than two hours. The dead children and six wounded were villagers hit by accident in the crossfire from pistols, rifles and tommyguns.

Old-style bandits are rare in Mexico these days, but the dense jungles and mountains in the state of Guerrero, outside the plush jet-set resort of Acapulco, have long been a bandit stronghold.

into the area only in large, heavily-armed groups.

The natives resent any uniformed authority and carry on blood feuds going back for generations.

The money was received from 37 separate contributions, the largest flurry of donations to date.

Gifts from children and pensioners were noticeable.

WISH FOR MORE

"Good luck, and we wish we could send more," they wrote. The fund will be divided and shared among the area's 500 neediest families in an effort to make this year's Christmas something to be remembered.

Donations to the 500 Fund can be sent or brought in to The Daily Colonist, 2631 Douglas, or

Knockout in 14th Round

Carlos Ortiz Claims Title

NEW YORK (AP) — Light-weight champion Carlos Ortiz, who looked more like a middleweight than a 135-pounder against his frail-looking opponent, stretched the 134½-pound Filipino on his back with a left hook to the chin late in the 14th round.

Ortiz, who looked more like a middleweight than a 135-pounder against his frail-looking opponent, stretched the 134½-pound Filipino on his back with a left hook to the chin late in the 14th round.

The loser was stretched out on the ring floor for several seconds after referee Jimmy Devlin counted him out. Then he was taken to a stool in a neutral corner while his handlers worked over him.

Giants, Redskins Combine For New Scoring Record

Washington Redskins set a new National Football League record on Sunday and New York Giants helped them establish a second new high in an almost unbelievable game won by the Redskins, 72-41.

Washington's 72 points topped the 70 scored by Los Angeles Rams against Baltimore Colts in 1950 and the two-team total of 113 points topped the 98 scored in 1948 when Chicago Cardinals defeated the Giants, 63-35.

The Washington total, however, was one point short of the 73 scored against the Redskins when they were blanked by Chicago Bears in the 1946 playoff final. But that's a separate record.

Sunday's fan-shocker started innocently enough as the Redskins took a 13-0 lead in the first quarter on two touchdowns by A. D. Whitfield, only one converted by Charlie Gogolak.

From there, the clubs averaged more than two points a minute with five touchdowns in each of the second and fourth quarters and four in third quarter.

Defence-back Brig Owens was the chief Washington contributor. He scored once with a 62-yard run after recovering a fumble, once with a 60-yard run after an interception and set up two more touchdowns with interceptions.

Whitfield scored three touchdowns in all. Charlie Taylor scored 32 and 74-yard touchdowns on passes from Sonny Jurgensen and Joe Don Looney. Bobby Mitchell and Rickie Harris, on a 52-yard punt return each scored one touchdown.

SOME PRACTICE
The last three points for Washington came when Charlie Gogolak kicked a 23-yard field goal with three seconds left.

Washington coach Otto Graham denied he had the record in mind when he sent in Gogolak with the score 68-41.

"I just wanted to give him some practice," Graham said. Largely because of five Washington interceptions and touchdowns on a fumble, punt and interception, yardage totals hardly matched the huge score.

Redskins had only 16 first downs while rushing for 309 yards and passing for 132. The Giants had 25 first downs, 162 yards rushing and 148 passing in getting their six touchdowns the harder way.

Meanwhile, where it counted Green Bay Packers lengthened their lead in the Western Conference to two games and St. Louis Cardinals pulled into a tie with Dallas Cowboys for the Eastern Conference lead.

PACKERS SCARED
Vikings were given another scare by Minnesota Vikings, who beat them once before this season, before pulling out a 28-16 win.

Vikings were tough again and were only 18-21 with possession and about three minutes left. But the Packers took the ball away and fullback Jim Grabowski put the decision away with a brilliant 33-yard "plunge" which saw him break two good tackles before getting in the clear.

KANSAS RAMPAGE
Baltimore Colts slipped back a game when they couldn't handle the tough Los Angeles defense and lost to the Rams, 27-7. Colts made only seven first downs and had a total offense of 140 yards.

The Cardinals, who haven't scored a touchdown in their last two games, beat Pittsburgh Steelers, 6-3, on two field goals by Jim Baaken. But while the St. Louis offense was spluttering without quarterback Charlie Johnson, the Cards' defense was brilliant in holding the Steelers to 32 yards rushing and 48 yards passing.

The Cowboys, who took the lead Thursday, were idle Sunday.

Ortiz was in control all the way, handling Elorde with the greatest of ease. The world champion from Puerto Rico hammered away at Elorde's body in the early rounds and then switched to the head.

The referee warned Ortiz for borderline right hand punches in both the third and fourth rounds.

In the 13th and 14th, Elorde was pulling away, twisting his body in apparent agony when Ortiz sent his punches to the body.

There were a few boos early and also in the late rounds from the crowd of 9,120 that paid $47.95 to see the uneven fight. The bout was televised to 23 states but blacked out in New York.

COME FOR MORE
Ortiz, a 3-1 favorite, rocked Elorde in the seventh and made his knees buckle in the 10th. Elorde wore a pained expression on his face for most of the fight, but kept coming in for more. He was unable to get inside Ortiz's left jab and the few blows he landed had little effect.

It was the third defence for Ortiz this year and his 10th lightweight championship match. He won the crown from Joe Brown in 1962, lost it to Ismael Laguna in Panama in 1965 and won it back the same year.

In his previous start Ortiz was involved in a riot in Mexico City when referee Billy Conn stopped his match with Sugar Ramos on a cut eye. Mexican fans stormed the ring and threw assorted objects at the champ.

The Iron Man, the Super Man Both Titles Apply to Hebenton

By BRIAN DOHERTY

Andy Hebenton has earned titles galore in his professional hockey career spanning 16 years. He's been called the Quiet Man, the Iron Man, the Super Man.

He's earned them all. Wednesday night he will play his 1,007th successive game of professional hockey.

All hockey will salute this once-in-a-lifetime achievement with a special "Andy Hebenton Night" Wednesday when the Victoria Maple Leafs meet Seattle Totems in Memorial Arena.

There will be speeches, presentations and a few surprises. Andy Hebenton last missed a regular game on March 8, 1952, when the then Victoria Cougars blanked Tacoma, 2-0.

"I missed three games then," recalled Hebenton. "But I can't remember what the injury was."

He has played games suffering charley horses and minor bruises.

The closest he got to missing a game was when he was with the New York Rangers.

"I got hit in the eye with a stick in a Wednesday game in New York and we had to go to Montreal for a Thursday night game," he said.

DROPS HELPED
"The doctor put some drops in the eye and cleared it."

Leafs coach Frank Marlio shook his head as he pondered the feat of a man playing so many games in succession.

"There are so many things that can keep a man out (of a game)," he said. "Cuts, bruises."

A supporter interjected: "How can anyone play pro hockey this long without once being benched by the coach?"

Leafs general manager Buck Houde added: "A lot of people think this record is better than Lou Gehrig's record (2,130 baseball games without a miss)."

"This guy (Hebenton) hasn't taken any short cuts."

NO FAKTION
Hebenton never had any flunkies about reaching the 1,000 mark.

"I never paid much attention to it until this year," he said. He said he had his share of luck in keeping the run going.

"When I've been hurt, we've had two or three days' break," he keeps in condition in summer, working with a local firm which, he says, helps to keep his legs strong.

He has had few regrets in hockey. One is that he never played in a Stanley Cup. New York made the semi-finals four times but never got any further.

ONE YEAR
After eight seasons with New York, he went to Boston for a year. Then it was to Portland for the 1964-65 season.

"I heard they let me go because my legs were finished," he said. "I don't know if that's true or not. I don't look for trouble — but just once in a while..."

"I haven't always been that way. When I first started out I had 61 minutes in penalties to lead the team (in 1951-52 with Victoria)."

"But I didn't score many goals. You waste too much time in the penalty box. That way you're hurting the team and yourself."

ANOTHER CHANCE
And how many more years did he think he had in hockey. "I'll wait and see about the NHL expansion. At my age (37) they might not give me a look in."

But he left no doubt that he would welcome one more call to the majors.

Andrew Alex Hebenton was born in Winnipeg Oct. 3, 1928. In 1950-51 he was a big hit with the Cougars when he formed the

"tid-line" with Reg Abbott and Bob Frampton.

He is the most liked and respected player on the Leafs' team and the Western League. He won the most gentlemanly awards in the NHL in 1957 when with the Rangers and in the WHL in 1964-65 season while with Portland.

SOMETHING SPECIAL
He is married to the former Gail Beveridge and has three children, Clayton, Terry and Karen.

Back to Buck Houde: "This guy is something special. Every once in a while you walk into someone like him. He is so unassuming that you think the last thing he was tied up with was pro hockey."

"He's compactly built. He can get whacked against the boards and then barrel down the ice. He's one of the greatest back checkers in the game today."

"There's a cliché in the game... this guy comes to play."

NHL president Clarence Campbell said in a recent letter to Houde: "Andy's wonderful record as well as his outstanding sportsmanship over the years certainly merits the tributes paid to him."

All hockey will join in Wednesday night to pay these tributes. Tickets are on sale at the Memorial Arena.

As Andy Hebenton says: "Hockey has been good to me." And he's been good to hockey.

Baseball Meeting Sees Pirates Busy

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates, who lost their chance at the National League championship last season because of a shortage of pitching, moved to remedy the situation Monday during the first day of major league baseball's annual winter meeting.

The Pirates obtained left-hander Juan Pizarro from Chicago White Sox in the only major transaction of the day other than the 21 players picked up in the draft.

Pizarro's purchase price wasn't announced but it was reported the White Sox were interested in first-baseman Don Clemons.

Pizarro had a 194 record with the White Sox in 1964 but arm trouble has held down his production for the past two seasons. He completed only one game last season while compiling an 8-6 record.

Another deal, reported near completion, was being brewed by Minnesota Twins and Atlanta Braves.

TWINS READY
The Twins are said to be ready to trade right-hander Jim "Mudcat" Grant and to be interested in Atlanta-shortstop Woody Woodward and relief pitcher Clay Carroll. It is also said that the Twins will deal right-hander Camilo Pascual if they can get their price in talent.

Meanwhile, the draft brought left-hander Bo Belinsky back for another big-league chance.

The colorful southpaw was taken off the San Diego roster for $25,000 by Houston Astros as major league clubs spent $389,000 trying to find a nugget in the draft.

New York Yankees, who usually disdain any draft action, grabbed two players from Baltimore Orioles, paying $25,000 each for outfielder-first-baseman Frank Tepedino and catcher Chuck Sands, who had both been placed on the Rochester roster.

MOUNTIES LOSE TWO
The Orioles picked catcher Larry Johnson from Toronto, Los Angeles Dodgers took right-hander Bruce Brubaker from San Diego and San Francisco Giants took outfielder Bill Sorell from San Diego.

Vancouver Mounties, farm team for Kansas City Athletics, lost two players. New York Mets picked outfielder Tom Reynolds and Boston Red Sox took pitcher Bill Landis.

Atlanta Braves asked waivers on Joey Jay in preparation to giving him his unconditional release.

Chualo Scores Knockout
SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Canadian heavyweight champion George Chualo of Toronto scored a second-round TKO over Dave Russell of Uxbridge, N.Y., in a scheduled 10-round boxing match Monday.

Chualo, 214, had a 37-pound advantage and used a solid right to demolish Russell, who took the mandatory eight count twice in the first.

A left hook dropped Russell for the last time before referee Max Kadin stopped the fight at 2:52.

Paid attendance was more than 3,000.

Bucks Stage Rally Earn Tie with Blades

strong the only goals he was to need.

Portland Buckaroos, playing their fourth game in five nights, managed to stage a third-period rally Sunday night in Los Angeles and tacked a point onto their Western Hockey League lead.

Down, 0-3, against the Blades, the Buckaroos started their comeback when Cliff Schmautz scored at 10:15 of the final period and pulled even on Connie Madigan's goal just 28 seconds from time. Neither club could manage to score in the overtime.

In Sunday's other game, Seattle Totems knocked over the speedy Vancouver Canucks, 5-1, in Seattle to drop Canucks nine points behind the Buckaroos with three games in hand.

Ex-Canuck Howie Hughes scored twice in the first period to give Seattle-rookie Jim Armstrong the only goals he was to need.

Portland's 1-3 tie with the Blades was the only tie in the league. The Buckaroos' record now stands at 10-10-1.

Seattle's 1-0 win over the Totems was the only win in the league. The Totems' record now stands at 10-10-1.

Vancouver's 5-1 win over the Canucks was the only win in the league. The Canucks' record now stands at 10-10-1.

Some Just Missed

Nominations Bring Surprises, Wins

Father Time Unbeatable

Time finally has run out on Nanaimo's Indian Hospital, long landmark on Vancouver Island. Remaining patients are scheduled to be moved to Vancouver Hospital this week, after which hospital doors will close for good. Tuberculosis has been practically licked and few deaths occur now, in comparison to 20 years ago.—(Agnes Flett)

Rain in Port Alberni Mainly Everywhere

PORT ALBERNI — Rain that started shortly after noon Saturday poured in a steady stream for almost 40 hours until shortly before dawn Monday to lead more than six inches of rain on the Alberni Valley.

City works crews and department of highways employees worked throughout the day Sunday opening ditches and culverts, and trying to control sidewalk-to-sidewalk pools that impeded motorists.

The Kilkits Creek area, where Alberni's flood control project is scheduled for construction, looked like a series of small lakes.

POOLS APPEAR

Pools appeared throughout the main ground, studied with willows and brush that backs the Alberni athletic hall. The creek itself filled its banks and rushed in a muddy stream to join the Alberni canal and Soanias River.

At the height of the soaking downpour, an old-timer fisherman stood on the floats at the rear of the Alberni city hall calmly casting a line, while passing motorists strove to peer through drenched windshields, and rare pedestrians picked their way through ankle-deep puddles.

In the McCoy Lake area, department of highways crews were busy diverting waters that threatened to flood several residents, who awoke to find water up to their backdoor steps. In most cases, however, the water succeeded only in turning back yards into chilly swimming pools.

Even the weatherman was not immune. Weather recorder Colin Wilson reported a plugged ditch sent a stream down through his yard, which ran under the door into his main greenhouse.

FLOOD DRAWN

With the water came leaves and small debris which soon plugged the floor drain, and flooded the greenhouse floor. Fortunately, the situation was discovered before any serious damage occurred.

Only a few yards down the road from the greenhouse, the water spread completely across the road, and motorists heading the "slow" signs were able to sneak through without problems.

However, on side roads many similar pools, unmarked, and small withouts provided rural residents with motoring headaches.

MOATED CASTLE

Thompson's McCoy Lake farm took on the appearance of a moated castle, with the farm buildings and the farmhouse on high land, almost completely surrounded by streams, pools and waterlogged fields.

Beaver, it is claimed, block the outlet to McCoy Lake, and while the fisheries department at one time used to remove the beaver to permit fish to come up McCoy Creek, this is no longer done, and the flooding has become an annual problem. The fact that part of the adjoining land becomes Indian reserve and under the jurisdiction of yet another federal department complicates the problem of flood control for unhappy residents of the area.

GOOD OLD DAYS

Some, no doubt, regret the passing of the "good old days" when local farmers used to dynamite the dams and let the waters flow away.

"Tough on the fish and the beaver, but it sure solved the flood problem," commented one old-timer.

Nominations closed across Vancouver Island Monday at noon and, as usual, there were some interesting developments.

Take Nanaimo, where Lionel Good and F. W. White just failed to make it.

Mr. Good, attempting to enter the aldermanic elections, brought his papers in minutes before the deadline, but was one nominator short of the two needed.

CLOSING HOURS

Mr. White, who wanted to run for a school trustee, was under the impression the nomination deadline was not until Monday's closing hours at city hall.

He missed by plenty as nominations closed at noon.

One of the highlights of Island's school board elections was that Wm. Peck, former chairman of Cowichan School Board and former president of the B.C. School Trustees' Association has decided not to seek re-election.

Then there's Kathleen Groubel, only Island mayor up for re-election.

So she won by acclamation in Ladysmith.

Two years ago she led a citizens' slate which ousted long-time civic leader Leonard Ryan and all but one of his council.

LIVELY SPOT

It is just as interesting in Port Hardy, a newly-incorporated district, and a lively one.

No one is opposing Reeve Clarence Cadwallader but 11 candidates, a Vancouver Island high, are seeking the six council seats. This includes the six incumbents.

FEW HIGHLIGHTS

Here are a few other highlights of the upcoming elections:

● Alberni and Courtenay councils have been elected by acclamation.

However, there will be council contests for Duncan, Ladysmith, Nanaimo and Port Alberni.

● As has often been the case, most trustees are getting in by acclamation.

It's even worse than that in Ucluelet, where they're one candidate short.

This trustee will be appointed by the government, since the people are not interested enough.

● There will be only one plebiscite — on the formation of a garbage district in North Cowichan.

● Most referendums deal with school matters.

One of the most outstanding of these is in Port Alberni. It's for $2,614,250, including kindergartens, library books, new classrooms and a new school gymnasium.

● The only contest for reeve has developed in Campbell River.

Jack Lee, the reeve for several years, is being opposed by K. M. MacDonald. In the same municipality, where reeve and council positions are always heated, six people are after three council seats.

● There are 110 candidates running for 71 positions over-all on the Island.

Sportsman Alert

Mystery Light Saves Hunters

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — A little light that never was, and the alertness of a fellow sportsman led to the rescue of two hunters in the Great Central Lake area shortly before dawn Monday morning.

First suggestion of trouble came when local sportsman F. (Sharkey) Schwarz reported to RCMP he had found a light delivery truck high up in the Branch 22 area, covered with snow, and with no sign of tracks around it.

RCMP notified the Alberni Valley Rescue Squad, and a group of the veteran woodsmen took off for the area in the rugged mountains surrounding Great Central Lake.

They located the truck, but finding no tracks around it, could not honestly be sure whether it had been parked just before the snowfall, or whether it had perhaps been abandoned because of some defect weeks before.

STANT SEARCH

Nevertheless, they began their search, one group making its way through the darkness around the other side of the lake, where the searchers felt the hunters would have arrived if they had taken a route from the truck over the mountain.

They thought they saw a light and a group went in by boat to that part of the lakeshore. Eventually they fired shots, and answering shots told them they were on the right track.

Finally they found Barry Smith, 26, and Ken Carter, 35, both of Cloverdale, soaked, exhausted, and suffering from exposure after being out in the driving rain and wind for close to 48 hours.

RIGHT ON SPOT

The rescue squad rushed the two to the B.C. Hydro station on the lake where they were attended on the spot by Dr. J. Clifford. By 4 a.m., the men were being tucked into warm beds at West Coast General Hospital, where they are in satisfactory condition.

Spokesman for the rescue squad termed the rescue of the two Cloverdale men "a miracle."

If Sharkey Schwarz hadn't felt he should notify police about the abandoned truck, Smith and Carter might not be alive today, since there was no one to report their absence.

WHAT LIGHT?

Because of the light they thought they saw, searchers went in by boat and found the men.

Yet the two men had no light and no means of making a fire. And the light is yet to be satisfactorily explained.

Just luck? Maybe so, but some of the searchers and the two who were rescued may take a lot of convincing.

For Better Board

Gray and Mates Work as Team

PORT ALBERNI — G. W. (Gerry) Gray, school trustee for more than 28 years who resigned early this month over teacher-salary policies of School District 74, is supporting a slate of school board candidates.

Mr. Gray stated he would run again provided he could find candidates to work with him.

He has chosen as his running mates Earl Foscroft of Alberni and Walter Beha and Kenneth Potts of Port Alberni.

OTHERS RUN

Also running are Richard Christie, of Alberni, present chairman of the board, and in Port Alberni, Leo Katia and Herb Welsh.

Mr. Gray claimed Monday the resignation of teachers in the area, more than 100, or 40 per cent, is more than twice the average for the rest of the province.

"Mutual trust and co-operation must be restored," he said, referring to the relationship between the school board and the local teachers' association.

GRAY TEAM

The Gray team is endorsing kindergartens operated under school board to give all youngsters an equal chance in Grade 1. At present kindergartens are available privately at a monthly rate.

The trustees on Mr. Gray's team will also introduce a

SOLID 'NO'

The platform of the Gray team also provides a solid "no" on the regional college unless there can be a firm commitment on location suitable to the Alberni. This they contend is in the Parksville-Qualicum area.

The group also stands on firm "no" to what it terms "junior second Eric J. Dunn junior high school experiment."

Mr. Gray's statement says that despite the warning that the campus-type school would be too expensive and that the department of education would only pay its share of the normal cost of a conventional building, trustees voted to go ahead anyway.

WHAT LIGHT?

Because of the light they thought they saw, searchers went in by boat and found the men.

Yet the two men had no light and no means of making a fire. And the light is yet to be satisfactorily explained.

Just luck? Maybe so, but some of the searchers and the two who were rescued may take a lot of convincing.

Nanaimo Hopes For Boost

Blacktopping is in progress at new Harbor Park shopping complex on CFB property in Nanaimo. On modern principles, it takes more room for shoppers' cars than for shoppers. Complex is expected to open in spring and city fathers hope it will give downtown area much-needed shot in arm.—(Agnes Flett)

Settlement In Sight

COURTENAY — School District 71 and its school teachers have agreed on a 7.5 per cent salary increase. It was disclosed at the board meeting Monday night.

However, since the dispute already has gone to arbitration, the matter now must be officially ratified by the two arbitrators, one for each side.

The board is not so fortunate with its non-teaching employees. These negotiations now have gone to conciliation.

Finances Force Failure

DUNCAN — A man felt financial circumstances forced him to plead guilty to an infraction of the Motor Vehicle Act.

Clarence Daniels of Kok-sallah said a lawyer advised him to plead not guilty to the charge of unlawfully operating a motor vehicle.

But Daniels said the expense was "too costly."

He had been involved in an accident earlier this month. Daniels was fined $40.

He said if he could not pay his fine he would "serve his time."

"It is too close to Christmas," he said.

Vandals On Spree

DUNCAN — Disgraceful vandalism has marked up town poles, shrubbery and windows on the property of the Chamber of Commerce here.

Red, powdery paint was discovered on the eyes, nose and hands of the Indian carvings. The powder was also found on the windows of the building Friday night.

Fall Fair Shows Surplus in Valley

COURTENAY — The Comox Valley Exhibition Association's annual meeting was held recently in the farmers' building, Centennial Park, with president T. G. Ryan in the chair.

Mrs. L. Hartman, treasurer, reported that the 1966 Fall Fair operation shows a surplus of $1,078.13. Revenue totalled $9,690.72 and expenditures were $8,612.59.

Fall Fair trophies were presented.

Susan Smith received the Courtenay mayor's trophy for the grand aggregate points in the floral section.

Mrs. R. A. Chapman received both the Bank of Montreal family competition trophy and the B.C. Hydro Homemaker of the Year Trophy.

The Arthur Hoskins Trophy for best floral display in the floral section was accepted by Mrs. R. Hodgson.

Election of five new directors, Mrs. L. Hartman, Jack Hoult, J. Larsen, Mrs. J. L. Luttrell and D. Halstead completed the business period.

Five other directors, Mr. Ryan, G. C. Pickard, W. Finlayson, E. J. Heal and J. Farquharson are completing their two-year term of office.

'LRB Has Key'

NANAIMO — Gordon Wickham, president of the Pulp and Paper Worker's Union Local 8, was unaware of the IWA request for government control of bugging.

"The question of personal privacy and freedom is an important issue," he admitted. "This is a separate issue from personal privacy," he added.

He was referring to the fact that the bugging had taken place at a meeting of the PPW in Vancouver.

"We're more interested in the events that led up to the incident," he said.

He maintained that it had been caused by Local 8 being refused certification, and the treatment of his local by the Labor Relations Board.

There would have been no reason for it, he said, claiming that a successful certification of Local 8 would have ended the matter.

The local has indicated that it will re-apply for certification at the next LRB meeting in May.

Family Hit Again

DUNCAN — Andrew Tom and his family are wondering what they have to do to get that fire jinx off their necks.

The Tom family was burned out of its home for the second time this year when Sunday's fire gutted its wooden frame building.

Mr. Tom, wife Isabel and their four children were at a band meeting when the fire broke out.

According to the municipal fire chief, the fire probably broke out in the wall behind the old wood burner.

RAISED ALARM

Solomon George, a neighbor, raised the alarm but the Southend volunteer fire brigade could do little at this time as the fire had gone out of control.

Chief Clackson said Monday the family may be able to salvage a few clothes from a back bedroom, "but that's all."

The home, rented by Mr. Tom, is on Quamichan Reserve.

The Tom family was burned out in January when it lived on Mission Road.

Mr. Tom is one of Cowichan's active members on the grievance committee.

The committee's meeting Sunday decided to make a special effort to find the family a new home. The Toms are currently staying with Mr. Tom's mother.

Driver Loses Twice

NANAIMO — Olaf Martin Olson was fined $45 and had his right to obtain a driver's licence suspended for six months.

Appearing before Magistrate Eric Winch Monday, he pleaded guilty to driving without due care and attention, and to driving without a licence Nov. 19.

He was fined $125 and $120 respectively.

He had been looking at the gas pedal because it had stuck, he told the court.

This had resulted in his vehicle leaving the road and striking a parked car in the Wheatheaf Hotel parking lot.

The struck car in turn hit another parked car, resulting in $600 damages.

Olson was hospitalized with broken ribs.

QUALICUM BEACH — Ratepayers here will not be called on to vote on a sewer bylaw at this time.

J. E. Brown, inspector of municipalities, made this clear to village council members when he refused to give approval to the request to submit the bylaw to the public at the Dec. 10 elections, and if the vote would be favorable, to wait until the financial picture improved before putting in a sewerage system.

Mr. Brown, although appreciating the need for sewers, stated that he was not prepared to give his approval until the money situation has eased. When this happens, he hopes council will re-submit the bylaw.

TOFINO — Tofino has been experiencing an extremely heavy rainfall for the past 24 hours. During that period the Tofino meteorological station recorded 2 1/2 inches of rain fell Sunday to 10 p.m. Monday, accompanied by winds and gusts up to 55 miles per hour.

NANAIMO — Ernest G. Ward was fined $50 and his licence suspended for 14 days in magistrates court Monday.

RCMP, who had chased Ward at speed of 80 m.p.h. along Terminal Avenue, had recommended the suspension.

He had a record of conviction.

Users Protest Rates

Bennett Can Expect Gas Mail Blizzard

Victoria's commercial gas users Saturday night unleashed a cloudburst of protests on provincial government and B.C. Hydro officials.

William Webb, president of the Canadian Restaurant Association's Vancouver Island branch, announced that approximately 700 letters were mailed which charge Victoria businesses suffer discriminatory gas rates.

Attached to the letters were sets of figures which show local businesses pay 2 1/2 times as much for gas as their counterparts in Vancouver, who also are B.C. Hydro customers.

"We'll have more letters going Tuesday," said Mr. Webb, who was also speaking for the motel and hotel operators, fish-fryers, bakers and other industries.

REPLY AWAITED

Saturday's letters went to Premier Bennett, Mines Minister Chant and MLAs Waldo Skilling, Herbert Bruch, John Tisdalle and Alan Macfarlane.

Dr. Gordon Shrum and Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, co-chairman of B.C. Hydro, will also get them.

The letters say: "We ask what you intend to do and await your reply."

The commercial gas users have also compared the local rates with those in Nanaimo. The comparison shows they are paying 65 per cent more than they would to the privately-owned gas company up-island.

Here are the examples of gas bills they have sent to government and Hydro officials, with the cost to an identical Vancouver industry with the same monthly consumption shown in brackets:

A local restaurant, $247.59 ($99.94); small bakery, $276.30 ($110.72); large bakery, $345.47 ($136.63); laundromat, $244.07 ($111.97).

The commercial users say Premier Bennett promised to reduce their rates in February. However, the rate reduction announcement which followed affected only residential customers.

Hydro says its rates in Victoria are higher than Vancouver because the gas has to be brought here in pressurized tanks and injected into the system.

Vancouver customers are simply connected to the natural gas line which runs from the Fort St. John, B.C., area to California.

PORT ALBERNI — RCMP

are investigating the death of a resident, 43-year-old Hee Man Choo, at the site of a house he was working on at 123 16th Avenue South.

Mr. Choo is believed to have fallen from the structure to his death over the weekend. His body was found Monday morning.

The deceased lived at 509 9th Avenue in Port Alberni.

Dock Woes Rise

B.C. longshoremen have been locked out until they promise to end their slowdown, the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association announced Monday.

The association also said it would sue the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's union for damages resulting from the current waterfront dispute.

In a press conference Monday in Vancouver, association president E. M. Strang said the suit had been made necessary as the result of slowdown tactics practised by longshoremen who "are being used as pawns in this power play of the union itself." He said no longshoremen would be called to work today unless the union gave its assurance they would work normally.

The association issued this statement: "Last Wednesday we sent a telegram to Roy Smith, president of the Canadian area (ILWU), protesting the slowdown tactics by members of the ILWU. "Since then, and for the past several days, we have ordered men for work and repeatedly warned them to cease slowdown tactics and perform in a normal fashion, otherwise they would be discharged. In almost all cases they have ignored the warning, acting on the instructions of the union, and have been discharged.

"We regret we have no alternative but to have our legal counsel proceed against the union with respect to suits for damages, which have now run into substantial sums.

"We have no doubt many of the men are ashamed of having to act in such a manner, but unfortunately they are being used as pawns in this power play of the union itself. It is economically not feasible to continue to employ men who do not perform. Consequently, they will not be employed until we are assured of normal performance."

The employers' association also discussed its discussions Continued on Page 1

Bennett Near Bullseye

By JACK FRY
Legislative Reporter

Premier Bennett was so happy with early Cariboo results Monday he didn't even wait for the last returns before jubilantly announcing the narrow victory of Attorney-General Bonner.

CLOSE PREDICTION

He telephoned Mr. Bonner at Quesnel to offer his personal congratulations and beamed like a proud father when it was announced he had predicted a week ago the attorney-general would win by 450 votes. Meanwhile, Opposition Leader

Mr. Bonner, loser to the Liberals in Vancouver Point Grey in September, got another chance when William Speare resigned after an easy Cariboo victory.

The close byelection result leaves legislative standings at Social Credit 33, the NDP 16 and Liberals six.

The turnout was better than 70 per cent, believed to be a record, despite chill temperatures, icy winds and snow.

SMALLER MARGIN

Rev. Hartley Dent, the New Democratic candidate, placed second, and improved on his September performance when he lost by 1,300 votes to Mr. Speare.

Liberal Lee Skipp was a distant third. Independent Reginald Mullins and Gerald Goejon, a Vancouver lawyer and member of the Free Trade party, attracted little attention. There were 12,547 eligible voters in the big rural constituency.

SINCE ELECTION

Cariboo has been a strong Social Credit seat since the party's 1952 election.

The victory was Mr. Bonner's second in a country area. He was first elected in Columbia in 1952 when a Social Credit member resigned to make room for the young lawyer who had been drafted into Premier Bennett's first cabinet. Mr. Bonner subsequently ran in the Vancouver area.

The attorney-general received 1,422 votes against 1,200 for Mr. Dent in Quesnel, the largest poll. The spread was a little narrower than in September.

LOST BIG ONE

The 37-year-old Dent, an Anglican minister, took his home poll of 100-Mile House by 791 to 225 but lost Williams Lake, another large poll, 647 to 673.

At exactly 9:40, Mr. Dent stepped across the street to concede defeat.

As he shook the hand of the attorney-general, Mr. Dent said: "I hope the real winner out of this will be Cariboo and the province of British Columbia."

HAD WEATHER

In the midst of his cheering supporters, Mr. Bonner replied: "Whatever we do let's never fight an election in this kind of weather again."

Mr. Bonner commented moments before the NDP conceded:

"I personally expected to drop quite a few votes from the last majority. The way I view it I came from behind in the last three weeks. This is the first time an NDP another campaign has been beaten. In this election the NDP Mafia have been swinging from the trees."

BY WEDNESDAY

He added: "I hope to be back on the job in Victoria by Wednesday."

Queried about his future as a minister, Mr. Dent said:

"What I do now all depends on Bishop Greenwood. I am a qualified teacher and I have been asked to teach junior high school classes in English and social studies. I have not made

Old Chezacut Had Spoken

By BERT BINNY

The 1966 Cariboo byelection now is a matter of history. It was thus in a provincial election of about 25 years ago save for one thing: the Chezacut poll.

Voting in the riding was over and the ballots were counted. A candidate had been elected by a comfortable majority.

But the returns from remote Chezacut, which lies south on the Fraser Plateau by the Chilcotin River, had not appeared.

The political pundits had a topic over which they could still argue. Though it couldn't possibly make any difference, which way would Chezacut go?

It was 10 days or so before the Chezacut returns arrived at headquarters.

The factions gathered. Argument was to be settled once and for all. The wisest would multiply forthwith. Suspense was terrific.

The result was proclaimed: Lebourdais (Lib.) 0, Thomas (CCF) 0. Chezacut had spoken.

500 Fund Jumps

Young Penny-Savers Help Needy to Limit

Generous Greater Victorians boosted the Colonist 500 Fund to $1,835.80 over the weekend and Monday, a rise of almost $400 over Friday's total.

The money was received from 37 separate contributions, the latest flurry of donations to date.

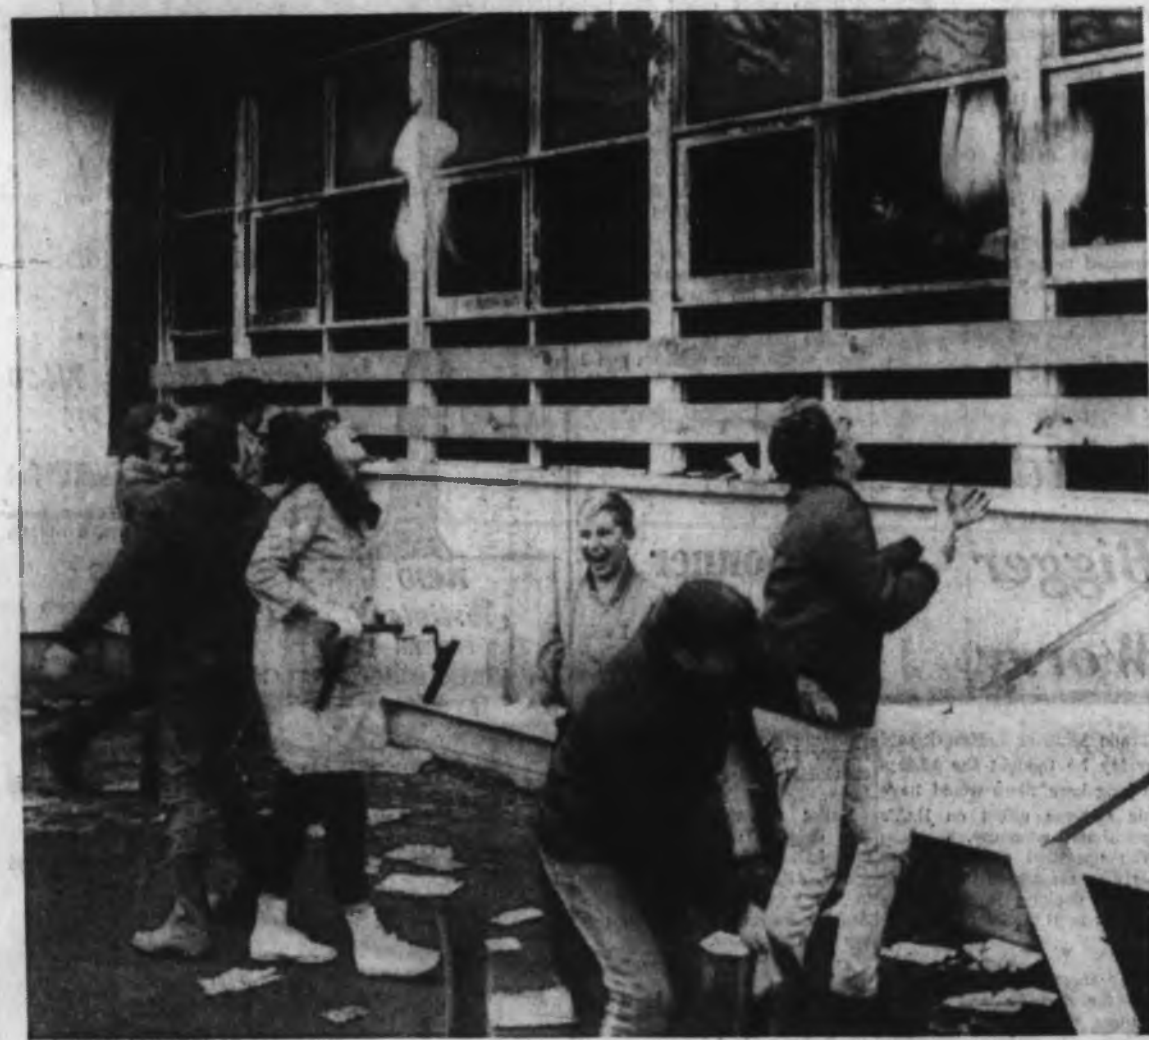

Gifts from children and pensioners were noticeable. Karen, Bruce and Wendy Irving of 567 Agnes had saved their pennies all year for the fund.

WISH FOR MORE

"Good luck, and we wish we could send more," they wrote. The fund will be divided and shared among the area's 500 neediest families in an effort to make this year's Christmas something to be remembered.

Donations to the 500 Fund can be sent or brought in to The Daily Colonist, 2631 Douglas, or family.

British Cool Smith Offer, Sanctions Mission Starts

'Grand Union' Certain

BONN (Reuters) — The top bodies of West Germany's Social Democratic party voted Monday to approve their leaders' controversial decision to join a "grand" coalition with the ruling Christian Democrats.

After a heated 10-hour debate, lasting until the small hours of this morning, the party's executive, finance committee and the leaders of state organizations endorsed the decision by an overwhelming majority.

The vote was 73 to 19 with no abstentions. The party's parliamentary group was believed certain to add its approval of the proposed alliance when it meets today.

Hot Time In Old Town

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal had its warmest Nov. 28 in 70 years Monday. The temperature reached 60.6 degrees. The 1896 record high was 55.

LONDON (AP) — Britain pressed on Monday night with plans to seek compulsory United Nations sanctions against rebellious white-ruled Rhodesia, but left the door open for a last-minute compromise.

Prime Minister Wilson ordered a high-level mission of Commonwealth and foreign office diplomats to Washington and Ottawa for talks on the Rhodesian crisis and its implications in Africa generally.

OTHER COUNTRIES

The mission, led by Sir Saville Gurner, career diplomat in charge of the Commonwealth office, flies to the United States today and later to Ottawa.

An authoritative source said "the government is conducting preliminary consultations with the Commonwealth and other countries about a reference to the United Nations regarding mandatory sanctions as contemplated in the commitments and timetable agreed with Commonwealth prime ministers."

Happiness Is Shut School

Happiest youngsters on Vancouver Island are those at Campbell River, where books flew into air on news that classes have been cancelled all week. Reason is more than $500,000 fire early Saturday that destroyed Cedar school, community's largest elementary school. School board is working on arrangements for renewed classes next Monday. —(Agnes Flett)

One Ship Lost, One Safe In Separate Sea Dramas

NEW YORK (AP) — A West German freighter was reported to have sunk and a Panamanian freighter which had radioed earlier she was on fire and sinking was said to be out of danger, in separate dramas at sea Monday night.

Swedish authorities said the 246-foot, 499-ton German vessel Schirokko sank in the Baltic Sea 35 miles east of Farøund, which is on the island of Gotland. The U.S. Coast Guard said it received word everyone aboard had been rescued.

The Schirokko's crew of 12 took to lifeboats when the cargo started shifting in a high sea and fog. The reports said a Danish fishing boat took the crew aboard.

The Coast Guard said the Panamanian freighter Sanrocco radioed from the Atlantic 1,800 miles southeast of New York she had put out a fire and needed no more immediate assistance.

Rustler Shootout Takes 11 Lives

ACAPULCO (UPI) — Eleven people died Monday in a shootout between police and rustlers in Mexico's "lawless territory," where the gun law of the old west still prevails. The dead included Juan Cano Iniguez, head of the rustling gang, three of his men, five policemen hit by stray bullets in the gun duel.

Six other people were wounded and in serious condition. Authorities said the shootout began when a police patrol surrounded the rustlers in the village of Tunas, about 20 miles from Acapulco, and the bandits refused to surrender.

The gun-battle lasted more than two hours. The dead children and six wounded were villagers hit by accident in the crossfire from pistols, rifles and tommyguns.

Oldstyle banditos are rare in Mexico these days, but the dense jungles and mountains in the state of Guerrero, outside the plush jet-set resort of Acapulco, have long been a bandit stronghold. Police and troops venture into the area only in large, heavily-armed groups. The natives resent any uniformed authority and carry on blood feuds going back for generations.

One such feud only 10 days ago resulted in the fatal shooting of six men from one family.
